U. S. Nettles Japan, Asking Right to Publish Notes

Request Carried to Emperor With New Protests on Amoy And Bombings

Tientsin and Neutrality

EVACUATION OF BRITISH women and children in Tientsin was begun as a second British warship anchored off the blockaded concession. Page 6.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT urged passage of the Bloom neutrality bill to facilitate formulation of foreign policy in event of war. Page 9.

JAPAN'S EMPEROR was consulted by Foreign Minister Arita, as a Tokyo newspaper reported rejection of British protests over Tientsin and said the government would support the military policy. Page 7.

U. S. Reaction Feared

By William V. Nessly.

The United States has made representations to Japan regarding the Japanese blockade at Amoy, China, has made fresh protests against continued Japanese bombing of American property in China, and, further, has placed the Tokyo government in an embarrassing position by asking assent to publication of the protests, along with Tokyo's reply.

Secretary Hull revealed yesterday that these steps had been taken, thereby giving point to his assertion of Monday that the United States is concerned with anti-Occidental developments in Japanese-controlled China.

The Secretary said there was no indication in dispatches from Eugene H. Dooman, United States Charge d'Affaires at Tokyo, who made the representations, that he had also discussed with the foreign office the more critical situation in the Japanese blockade at Tientsin.

To Emperor Himself

Dooman's discussion of the Amoy situation was with officials of the American section of the Tokyo foreign office, and was in line, Hull said, with usual contacts maintained by the embassy.

The representations regarding the bombings, however, were made on instructions from the State Department and were communicated to the foreign minister himself.

So serious did Japanese officials consider the American request for publication of the protests and the Japanese reply that it was taken to Emperor Hirohito himself by the foreign minister.

The assent still has not been given.

Official fear of the effect on public opinion, in Japan as well as in other countries of the world, is believed here to be responsible for Tokyo withholding the communications.

World Reaction Feared

While Japan is so tensely involved in controversy with Great Britain over the blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin, Tokyo leaders are understood to fear the effect of public knowledge of this country's stiffened attitude toward Japanese actions in China.

Fear, also, that publication of the correspondence would arouse Amer-

Brazil's Commander Reviews U. S. Forces, Finds Them 'Ready'

Gen. Monteiro Sees 2,000 Infantrymen And 64 Tanks at Fort Meade; Doesn't Know Whether He'll Visit Germany

America welcomed a distinguished visitor to her shores yesterday and gave him a first glimpse of this Nation seldom seen by foreign notables.

Gen. Pedro Aurelio Goes Monteiro, chief of staff of the Brazilian army, was given a hearty handshake and a friendly greeting by our military and naval high command, symbolic of the close relations existing between the two domains. The visitor was treated to a military display of impressive dimensions to start him on a 26-day good-will tour of the United States.

Instead of seeing New York's skyline and its teeming millions—America to most of the world—Gen. Monteiro arrived at the Naval Academy aboard the United States Cruiser Nashville and came to Washington, for a two-day stay, through romantic Annapolis and the green countryside of rural Maryland.

Gen. Monteiro was most enthusiastic about the military review staged for him at Fort George G. Meade, Md., during which 64 speedy, heavily armored modern tanks and 2,000 infantrymen were paraded before him. He declared they "looked ready to take the field at once."

"Flying Fortresses" in Show

Squadrons of "flying fortresses" and fast pursuit planes were on hand to impress the visitors with the modern fighting efficiency of the Army Air Corps, and 600 tons of the latest type high-speed tanks engaged the eager curiosity of the Brazilian officers.

It was a friendly, intimate party on the lawn of the Officers' Club at Fort Meade, however, that pleased Gen. Monteiro and his aides most. There, with the ladies of the post on hand and a glass of something cold to drink, they found a lack of formality quite different from the usual stiff formality of an international military reception.

Gen. Monteiro saw the first of his many guards of honor when he entered American waters early yesterday. He was met at the Virginia capes by 52 bombers and pursuit planes from Langley Field, Va. They escorted the warship part way up the Chesapeake.

Gen. Marshall Pleased

Aboard the Nashville was Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall, American Deputy Chief of Staff, who is soon to become Chief of Staff. He has been on a good-will tour of Brazil, and will conduct his recent host part of the way on Gen. Monteiro's 26-day trip through the United States.

After disembarking with the distinguished visitors, Gen. Marshall told the press that he and his aides were given a very gracious reception everywhere in Brazil and were greeted with unmistakable evidences of friendship.

"From the moment of our arrival in Rio until our departure two weeks later we were virtually overwhelmed by the hospitality and gra-

Manton Gets 2 Years and $10,000 Fine

Ex-Judge of Appeals Court Is Denounced by Jurist as a Betrayer

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 20.—Martin T. Manton, only member of the Federal judiciary ever to be thus stigmatized in all the 150 years of its history, was sentenced today to two years in prison and fined $10,000 for selling his integrity as senior judge of the Second District U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

From the same bench upon which he once had passed judgment on the acts of other men, he was coldly denounced by Federal District Judge W. Calvin Chestnut, of Maryland, as the betrayer of "a sacred trust."

The punishment was the maximum the law allowed. He was convicted on June 3, specifically of conspiring to obstruct justice in accepting bribes to influence his judicial decisions.

The only one of his four co-defendants who stood trial with him, George M. Spector, an insurance broker, was sentenced to a year and a day and fined $5,000.

John L. Lotsch, formerly a minor Brooklyn politician and banker, was sentenced to one year and $1,000 fine, and Forrest W. Davis, an accountant, received a suspended sentence and two years of probation.

William J. Fallon, described by the Government as the former judge's intermediary for bribes, was ill and disposition of his case was deferred. All three had pleaded guilty and aided the prosecution.

Manton, 58, tall, angular, his eyes boring through his pince nez, standing before another gravely stern judge—as so many had stood before him in his 22 years on the Federal bench—read his own brief, pleading

Predeterminator Of Sex Is Wrong, Fathers a Girl

Newark, N. J., June 20 (AP).—Sidney A. Fortel, self-styled sex predeterminator, who announced last March his wife would bear him a son, became the father of a girl late today.

Fortel, linen supply company owner, had said that after 20 years of study he had a "secret formula" that guaranteed his wife would bear a son.

Last March when Fortel predicted birth of a son he set June 17 or 18 as the deadline. When a child was not born by Sunday night, the prescribed date, he said the "baby will be delayed about 10 days."

House Farm Conferees Yield on Parity

Final Action Delayed On Billion Dollar Bill Until Today

House farm bill managers yesterday yielded to the Senate in approving the unbudgeted $225,000,000 farm parity price appropriation previously disapproved by the House and the target for repeated warnings by the President that taxes must be provided to meet the payments.

After approving the controversial parity price provision, the House and Senate farm conference committee delayed final action on the record-breaking $1,218,000,000 farm bill report until today.

The conferees were expected to ask the House for a separate vote on the $113,000,000 added by the Senate for farm surplus disposal, including subsidized marketing abroad of cotton and other commodities, but this was not definitely determined.

Final agreement on cotton export subsidy features still in controversy is expected this morning.

Tentative action by the conferees up to last night was said to net a reduction of only $7,000,000 in the Senate's aggregate $380,000,000 increase in the farm bill.

The House voted down a similar farm bill amendment providing $250,000,000 for farm parity payments, and likewise disapproved a $60,000,000 amendment for surplus removal and export subsidies.

President Tosses Friendly Gesture Toward Garner

President Roosevelt yesterday revived the dunce corner for newspapermen who ask him about a third term, and, incidentally, tossed a gesture of friendship in the direction of Vice President Garner.

Owing to agitation by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and other New Dealers for a third term, Arthur T. Weil, correspondent for the Buffalo Evening News, asked the President point-blank whether he intended to run next year.

The President, commenting that some columnists had found significance in his failure to mention the corner recently in response to third term questions, he said he obviously had made a mistake. Therefore, he said, he would revive the corner, and he told Weil to go stand in it.

Asked by a newspaperman when he thought Congress would adjourn, he advised him to ask the Vice President, who makes the book on that question. The reference was to Garner's reputation as an adjournment prognosticator.

Harlan Coal Firm Quits Union Opposition

Harlan, Ky., June 20 (AP).—William Turnblazer, Harlan district president of the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.), announced tonight the Creech Coal Co. had signed a "union shop" contract with the union—the first member of the Harlan County Coal Operators' Association to do so.

The company will put 350 men back to work tomorrow, Turnblazer said.

Tax Revision Bill Rushed To Senate

Committee Approves Measure Indorsed By Roosevelt As 'Very Good'

By Robert C. Albright

Indorsed by the President as a very good bill, the $1,644,300,000 House corporate tax revision measure yesterday moved at double quick time through the Senate Finance Committee toward ratifying action in the Senate this week.

Less than 24 hours after House passage, the Senate Finance Committee unanimously approved the bill, abandoning the undivided profits tax and substituting an 18 per cent flat corporate tax on firms earning more than $25,000.

A score of minor changes were approved, but Chairman Pat Harrison said these did not materially alter either the bill or its revenue yield.

Consolidated Returns Allowed

Amendments granted American companies with foreign subsidiaries the right to file consolidated tax returns, revived for six months permission to seek processing tax refunds, and authorized authors, inventors and others receiving lump sum payment for five years or more personal services to spread their income for tax purposes over the entire period.

The tax bill had hardly cleared the House and the Senate committee before Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee announced hearings opening June 28 on the President's recommendations for removal of tax exemptions on income from future issues of Federal, State and local securities.

President Wants Action

At his White House press conference, President Roosevelt said he hoped for action this session on the public securities tax measure. Both the President and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had urged double barreled provisions, eliminating security exemptions on the one hand and scaling down high income surtax rates on the other. But Doughton said the hearings would be confined to tax exemption features. Surtax modification, he said, would be considered during Congressional studies next fall.

As if to emphasize his plea that public security issues be subject to tax, the President yesterday vetoed a bill extending until June 16, 1942, the date for completion of the new Niagara Falls Bridge. The President said he had no objection to the bridge, but chose this means of making certain the income and bonds of the project would not be exempt. The bill was immediately reintroduced in the House with exemption features removed.

Signature Expected

The President's press conference comment that the new corporate tax bill is very good removed any doubt that the President will sign the measure. He permitted the 1938 corporate tax measure to become law without his signature. When Senator Harrison, Representative Doughton, Secretary of the Treasury

Senators Hear MacLeish Protest, Back Nomination

The Senate Library Committee yesterday heard American Library Association officials protest the nomination of Archibald MacLeish for Congressional Librarian and followed the testimony by promptly voting a favorable report for his confirmation.

The committee heard Harold F. Brigham, Louisville (Ky.) Free Library director, condemn the nomination of the 47-year-old poet, teacher and editor as being without justification because he is a non-librarian.

Reasons for the A. L. A.'s disapproval, Brigham said, were that the administration of a great library demands a person qualified by experience and special knowledge.

Also testifying to the same purpose was Harry M. Lydenberg, director of the New York Public Library.

300 Families Flee Texas Storm

Colorado City, Tex., June 20 (AP). Cloudburst-swollen streams of west Texas drowned one person today, swept away highway and railroad bridges, and drove 300 families from their homes here and at nearby Snyder.

Ollie Morrow, 60, Snyder businessman, was drowned by a flash flood which swept him from a bridge.

The Colorado River battered down a railroad bridge and a highway bridge, and destroyed two smaller spans. Rail and highway traffic was at a standstill here.

1920 Device 'Would Have Saved Squalus'

Lieut. Naquin, at Inquiry, Approves Valve System Asked by S-5 Investigators; Holds Ventilators Vulnerable to Bombs

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., June 20.—The commander of the submarine Squalus, still the sunken sepulcher of 26 men, told a naval board of inquiry today a recommendation born of a submarine disaster nearly 19 years ago might have prevented the recent tragedy if it was caused by a faulty air induction valve.

JACOBS
Named as Hero

Lieut. O. F. Naquin, one of the few undersea commanders who has escaped from a sunken craft to tell his story, asserted that improved ventilating equipment might have saved the Squalus and that current devices might prove "fatally defective" in time of war.

It was near the close of a full day on the witness stand for Naquin that Capt. William R. Munroe, assistant director of naval intelligence, asked the Squalus' commander if the accident could have been prevented if there had been a device to prevent the flooding of the vessel's ballast tanks, necessary before a dive, until opened air induction valves were closed.

"I believe such a device would have prevented this tragedy," the lieutenant answered.

Capt. Munroe based his question on a recommendation by another board of inquiry, which investigated the sinking of the S-5 off the Delaware Capes in September, 1920.

That board had recommended that "steps be taken to investigate and install, if found possible, . . . a device which, by means of interlock, will insure that the middle ballast tank vent is closed until the main induction valve is closed."

Whether the recommendation was acted upon and found not feasible was not brought out.

The dramatic highlights of the day centered around Naquin's testi-

Elderly Cripple Swindled Out of $1,216 Savings

A 72-year-old retired Government messenger was flim-flammed out of his life savings—$1,216—last Thursday by the age-old envelope trick, he reported to police yesterday.

Saunders Miller, colored and crippled, former General Accounting Office employe, told police of how he went riding with a colored man, got his money from a bank and then relinquished it to a second man "to show his good faith."

Miller said a man came to his house, 414 T street northwest, to rent a room. He offered to take Miller for a ride, on which they met a second man who had "just found an envelope full of money." Miller produced his money so that there would be an even split. He has not seen the men since.

Illness Silences Senator Glass

Illness kept Carter Glass, senior Senator from Virginia, in his Mayflower Hotel apartment yesterday when he wanted very much to make a speech in the Senate against continuing the President's authority to devalue the dollar.

Feeling "very badly" by his own estimate, Senator Glass said he didn't hope to get to the Capitol this week.

War Department May Have to Furlough 400

Four hundred employes of the construction division of the War Department learned yesterday they may be placed on leave indefinitely without pay after June 30.

Their status depends upon passage of the supplemental Army appropriation bill, which carries $59,600,000 for building new air bases and expanding existing Air Corps stations throughout the country. It will be taken up in the House today. While passage is expected by evening, it must be acted on by the Senate and signed by the President before July 1, if the threatened furlough is to be avoided.

Charity Slot Machines Barred When Gamblers 'Muscle In'

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday banned the use of slot machines at carnivals and benefit parties after volunteer firemen testified gamblers had attempted to "muscle in" on the law which permits chance games for charitable purposes.

Efforts of slot machine operators to make a deal by which fire companies would sponsor the gambling devices and receive $100 a week or a 10 per cent cut on the "take" were described by Karl Young, of Mount Rainier Department; William Miles, of Hillside, and George Rheinbold, of Cottage City.

Declaring "the firemen's association has too good a reputation to be identified with such methods," Young, who is president of the State Firemen's Association, succeeded in having the commissioners adopt a statement of policy prohibiting slot machines and imposing stringent requirements on organizations seeking permits to sponsor chance games for charity.

Introduced by Commissioner John Beall, the resolution reversed the board's stand of a week ago when they agreed to issue monthly permits to "nonprofit groups," allowing them to conduct games of chance for charity anywhere in the county.

The new order requires that organizations seeking permits must agree not to operate slot machines and must designate the time and place for which permit is intended. No permit will be issued for longer than two weeks.

Senate Committee Kills D. C. Income Tax

Overton Formula And Renewal of Privilege and Realty Levies Substituted

By James D. Secrest.

The Senate District Commitee yesterday voted to kill the House-imposed income tax and other proposed new levies and to substitute the Overton fiscal formula with a renewal of the business-privilege tax for another year.

The action was taken in executive session following a public hearing at which testimony for and against the income tax was given by representative civic and business groups.

Only Chairman King voted against adoption of the Overton formula, while Senator King and Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, voted for an income tax in lieu of the business-privilege levy.

8 to 1 for Overton Plan

The vote was 8 to 1 for the Overton plan and 7 to 2 for continuation of present taxes for another year.

Voting with Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, were Senators McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada; Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware; Clark (Democrat), of Idaho; Austin (Republican), of Vermont; Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Holman (Republican), of Oregon.

Unless the Senate upsets the recommendation of the District Committee, it appeared likely that Senate and House conferees will compromise on acceptance of the business-privilege tax rather than the income levy because the former was approved by the House District Committee before the House adopted amendments offered by minority members.

There was some confusion last night as to whether the Senate committee action renews the business privilege tax with present rates or permits the substitution of the gross receipts levy that was knocked out of the House bill by the House.

New Draft Ordered

The business privilege tax carried in the House bill as reported doubled the present tax on professional men and substituted a new graduated levy on gross receipts of businessmen while retaining the present limit of four-tenths of 1 per cent.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal was instructed to prepare an entirely new draft of the revenue legislation for presentation to the committee tomorrow so that the matter can be straightened out.

Senator Overton said he understood the committee action to be that all new taxes in the House bill, including an increase in the levy on public utilities, an estate tax, and a 2 per cent gross tax on parking lots, have been stricken.

Administrative changes in the inheritance tax, an authorization for the Secretary of the Treasury to advance funds to the District, and other administrative changes in present revenue laws will be allowed, it was said.

Rate Depends on Conference

The effect of the Senate committee's action, if sustained, will be to continue the intangible personal property tax, which would have been repealed by the House bill.

The fixing of the real estate tax will be left to the discretion of the Commissioners, and the rate will depend upon the amount of appropriations agreed on in the conference over the 1940 District supply bill plus the final fate of the Overton fiscal formula.

Should the House accept the formula and allow the $7,750,000 lump sum payment voted by the Senate in the supply bill, the Commissioners could reduce the realty rate to $1.80 or $1.60, depending upon the amount of general fund appropriations.

If the House refuses to increase the lump sum, however, the realty

Compromise Plan Is Sought On Credits to Small Business

The Administration is at work on a compromise small business credit plan, it was learned yesterday after Secretary of Commerce Hopkins had held a second conference on the subject with leading Government experts.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt revealed that he may make an announcement Friday on a number of new lending schemes. He said it probably would not be in the form of a message to Congress.

He had said previously that Congress might be asked to enact legislation at this session increasing the loan limits of lending agencies. No final decision has been reached on this question, he explained yesterday. The proposal to set up a special corporation to buy and lease equipment to railroads is still being studied, he declared.

Hopkins, who has been assigned the task of developing an Administration small business credit program, called in officials and experts of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Reserve Board and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The group, it was learned, is considering the loan insurance bill of Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, as well as the industrial loan corporation plan advocated by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Reserve Board.

Bankers, meanwhile, continued their attack on the Mead bill before the Senate Banking Committee.

All of a sudden GOP politicians are beginning to talk quietly of Dewey as a candidate for Vice President instead of President . . . Oil Conspiracy Defendants Pay $20,000 in Fines

Madison, Wis., June 20 (AP).—E. B. Reeser, of Tulsa, Okla., and the Barnsdall Refining Co., defendants in two oil conspiracy cases, paid fines totaling $20,000 in Federal district court today after changing pleas of innocence to no defense.

Judge Patrick T. Stone fined Reeser and the corporation $2,500 each under an indictment charging producers conspired to raise and fix retail gasoline prices in the Midwest. Both were convicted in a trial held here last year, but had been granted new trials by the Federal Court of Appeals.

They also paid fines of $2,500 on each of three counts, totaling $7,500 each, on a second indictment charging conspiracy to fix dealers' margins. The fines under the dealers' margin indictment were the first paid by any of more than two-score defendants. Several defendants, Sharfman said, have paid fines in the price-fixing case.

Teary Tallulah Begs for Life Of WPA Stage

Harrington, LaGuardia Attack Other Items In Relief Measure

The glamorous eyes of Tallulah Bankhead, golden-haired heroine of the movies and stage, were turned on a Senate Appropriations sub-committee yesterday in an effort to rescue the Federal Theater Project from threatened destruction.

Miss Bankhead, daughter of the Speaker of the House and niece of Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, tearfully begged the committee to continue the theater project, banned in the $1,735,000,000 relief bill passed last week by the House.

Other features of the bill, notably provision for a three-man administrative board and earmarking of $125,000,000 of WPA funds for PWA, were attacked by Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator. The trim, tight-lipped chief of WPA will conclude his 48-page statement criticizing the new relief measure at another executive hearing of the sub-committee this morning.

LaGuardia Fears Leaf-Raking

A third prominent defender of the work relief organization, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, told reporters the House bill "will destroy the value of WPA in the big cities and will turn the projects into leaf-raking and artificially created work."

Presidential opposition to the proposals for a three-man board and the PWA earmarking intensified belief in the Senate that these sections of the House bill would be altered in committee or on the floor. A strong fight will be made for saving the theater project and for permitting it and other arts projects to continue without local sponsorship.

An amendment to this effect was introduced yesterday by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, joined by Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, and Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana.

Uncle Sponsors Actress

Senator Wagner told reporters, "I was recently defending the theater project to a member of Congress, and I spoke of its cultural values. But he replied, 'Culture? What the hell—let 'em have a pick and shovel.'"

Miss Bankhead, who was accompanied to the committee room by her father and "Uncle John" and a group including Blanche Yurka and Hallie Flanagan, head of the Theater Project, warned that if the theater project is abolished its beneficiaries will be "utterly destitute."

When Miss Bankhead met her uncle in Senator Pepper's office before her hearing, she gave Senator Bankhead a kiss and a hug and exclaimed with a twinkle that she was "going to make Uncle John read the life of Robert E. Lee on the floor of the Senate for two years if necessary to filibuster this thing through."

"Uncle John," however, confessed later that he wasn't so sure about it all. "I'm not sponsoring the theater project; I'm sponsoring Tallulah," he remarked.

Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.
Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

The Gallup Poll

Fourth of Nation's Voters Believe They Pay No Taxes; Most Are in Lowest Income Level

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, June 20.—The campaign of taxpayers' association and consumers' groups to make the public conscious of taxes still has considerable distance to cover in achieving its goal, judging by the results of a national study of the tax consciousness of American voters.

The survey, conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, questioned a cross-section of the voting population in all walks of life, asking each individual whether he or she paid any taxes of any kind.

Although virtually everyone in the Nation actually pays taxes in some form, either direct or indirect, nevertheless the survey found that one-quarter of the voters do not think they are taxpayers. The actual vote is:

Do you happen to pay any taxes?
Yes	75%
No	25

Host of the persons who are not conscious of paying any taxes are in the lower income level—the group earning less than $20 a week. Yet recent studies show that persons earning $20 a week actually pay taxes of more than $100 a year.

The fact that a quarter of the Nation's voters think they pay no taxes may help to explain the enthusiasm for Government spending which many Institute studies have found in the lower income levels. There is apparently little connection, in the minds of these voters, between the cost of government, both local and Federal, and their pocketbooks.

Do you happen to pay any taxes?	Yes	No
Upper income voters	93%	7%
Middle income voters	81	19
Lower income voters	60	40

The relatively high "no" vote in the lower income level is undoubtedly caused by the fact that few of these voters have to pay direct taxes, such as the Federal income tax or levies on property and real estate. Most of the taxes they pay are "hidden taxes"—a form of levy which Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau thinks Congress should take steps to eliminate in favor of more direct taxation.

The study found that, in general, Democrats are less conscious of taxes than Republicans are, and that persons living in small towns are more conscious of individual tax bills than persons living in cities or on farms.

An interesting contrast is also shown in the political attitude of persons who say they are taxpayers and those who say they are not.

Voters who look upon themselves as taxpayers are for President Roosevelt by a small majority, whereas those who say they pay no taxes approve overwhelmingly of him as President today.

	Approve of Roosevelt	Disapprove
Those who say they pay taxes	54%	46%
Those who say they pay no taxes	71	29

Straus Says USHA Beats Slum Rents

Reveals New Projects Will Charge $6.69 To $17 Per Month

By turning construction supervision over to local authorities and cutting down on artistic touches, the United States Housing Authority has been able to build houses that will rent for less than average prices now paid for slum dwellings, Nathan Straus, USHA administrator, announced yesterday.

Rent schedules set for projects soon to open in four cities, Straus revealed, range from an average of $6.69 per month for a family unit in Austin, Tex., to $17 in Brooklyn. The average will be $10.58 in Jacksonville, Fla., and $13.25 in Buffalo, he said.

Straus termed these rates the "lowest rents for decent housing ever reached in this country," but declared USHA could better them on future projects. They mean that families now compelled to live in slums actually can be rehoused and that it no longer will be said that poor people cannot afford to live in Government-built structures, he said.

Families who will live in these four projects, he said, have average annual incomes ranging from $400 in Austin to $950 in New York. Since private capital is not now providing new housing for income groups with incomes below $1,750, according to Straus, the USHA program "is far from competing with it on these projects."

Utility charges have not been included in the rent announcement, Straus said, because they vary much from locality to locality.

Artistic touches on which the Government has "compromised" on these first USHA projects, Straus revealed, include smaller shrubs and trees and commoner varieties, fewer porches, less provision for radios and telephones, more cement floors and less basement space.

First among factors that have contributed to lowering construction costs he placed the fact that these projects have been designed by local housing authorities to meet local situations and have utilized local materials. There has been no "double checking" with local officials, he said, and no Federal construction inspection.

NLRB Prevents Discipline of Union Workers, Gall Says

By the Associated Press.

John C. Gall, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, testified yesterday the National Labor Relations Board had made it impossible for industrial employers to discipline union employes.

"It doesn't matter what the man was discharged for if the board can find there was a union activity involved, whether it was a wrong or right activity," Gall testified before the Senate Labor Committee.

On Capitol Hill

Senator Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, asked the Senate yesterday to investigate espionage activities in the United States and also the possibility that sabotage may have caused the sinking of American, British and French submarines in the last month.

Sen. Barbour

Asserting there was "widespread evidence of espionage and sabotage," a resolution by arbour would authorize an appropriation of $40,000 for a seven-member committee which would report to Congress next January.

Te resolution declared the American submarine Squalus "sank under mysterious circumstances" May 23. The committee would be directed to determine whether there was any similarity between this distaster and those that befell Britain's Thetis and France's Phenix.

The Senate approved the nomination of O. John Rogge, of Illinois, to be an Assistant Attorney General in the Justice Department, succeeding Brien McMahon, who resigned.

The House approved a compromise version of the War Department's $305,192,984 civil functions appropriations bill but sent it back to the Senate for concurrence in a minor amendment.

Funds carried by the bill were earmarked principally for flood control and rivers and harbors improvements, including $5,700,000 for the proposed $54,000,000 Denison dam on the Red River between Texas and Oklahoma.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, said yesterday there should be a constitutional amendment requiring Congress to vote on every bill introduced.

"But I probably won't introduce it," he told reporters, "because I learned early in life that it was futile to attempt the impossible."

President Roosevelt signed legislation designed to keep 2,000 officers of Federal reserve banks from losing their jobs.

The measure continues for five years from last Friday the time in which the officers must pay up all obligations to their banks.

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia has said that 7,000 bank officers owed their banks $132,000,000 when a law forbidding such loans was approved in 1933. He estimated that 2,000 bankers now owe $32,000,000, and said that unless they were given additional time they would lose their jobs and could not pay at all.

Wine Vouchers Create Stir in Buckner Trial

$29 Item for Broken Chair Included; $1,566 Bill Run Up Here

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 20.—Champagne and lobster were on Bill Buckner's diet two summers ago when he headed a Philippine Railway bondholders' committee, a witness testified today in Federal Court, where the dashing young promoter and four others are being tried on mail fraud charges.

Spectators chuckled as Dorothy Mattox of the Hotel St. Regis staff identified vouchers showing that in July, 1937, Buckner and William J. Gillespie, a codefendant, bought lavishly of fine wines, Scotch whiskies and seafoods. Also there was an item of $29 for a broken chair.

The Government contends that Buckner, known formally as William P., jr., defrauded holders of the railroad bonds by wasting their money in high living while he ostensibly was working to get the hilippine government to redeem the defaulted issue.

Also on trial are a Filipino senator, Felipe Buencamino; John Stuart Hyde, British movie figure, and C. Wesley Turner, broker.

The lavish living was not confined to New York, the Government contended, introducing evidence that from July 12 to August 19 Buckner and Gillespie ran up a $1,566 bill at the Carlton Hotel in Washington. Among a series of Scotch and champagne items, there was one for a 25-cent headache remedy.

Dropping for the moment the crowd-pleasing evidence that Buckner was friendly with movie stars and took beautiful women on trips to Washington, the Government introduced a letter to Buckner, dated last July and signed with the name of Senator Buencamino.

It stated that Buencamino was unable to "proceed" with the bond redemption negotiations unless Buckner deposited $50,000 in Manila —"$10,000 for me, $15,000 for the trip (to London) and $25,000 for others interested."

Japanese Ship Silver Here to Obtain War Credits

Japan, hard pressed by her costly war against China, is trying to boost her silver sales to the United States Treasury to obtain credits to aid in carrying on the war, according to reports reaching here.

Silver is being commandeered for shipment to this country, it is said, and every effort is made to cut down on domestic consumption of the metal to have more to send over.

Silver shipments to this country are being increased. Thus far this year Japan has shipped $2,260,214 of silver to the United States. This is at the rate of about $5,000,000 annually as compared with $2,929,567 in 1938.

From March, 1937, until the present time, Japan has sold $186,000,000 of gold to the Treasury. Silver valued at between $100,000,000 and $150,000,000 has been purchased from China by the United States, thus compensating partially for the aid given Japan through purchase of gold.

Envoy Optimistic On Mexican Oil

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador, said yesterday he would leave for Mexico this week to discuss with President Cardenas the situation which grew out of expropriation of American-owned oil properties.

Castillo Najera expressed optimism that a satisfactory solution could be worked out. He concurred in a view expressed earlier yesterday by Ramon Beteta, Mexican undersecretary of state, who visited Secretary Hull and said later he saw no reason why the controversy could not be settled.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee reported favorably a bill authorizing the Government to pay $3,000,000 awarded to claimants whose suits have been allowed by the Mexican general claims commission.

Under the measure, already passed by the Senate, 124 claimants would receive awards for losses incurred in Mexico from 1884 to 1827.

Plan 'Would Have Saved Squalus'

He recounted a report from Ensign Joseph W. Patterson, of Oklahoma City, Okla., who perished, that his aftersection was "rigged" and ready as the operations preparatory to the final, fatal dive were executed.

He commended Lawrence Gainor, electrician's mate, as the man who, "unmindful of the danger and on his own initiative," pulled a switch in the forward battery room of the Squalus as she dropped, "undoubtedly saving a serious battery fire."

Radiomen Commended

Special commendation went also to the radiomen and signalmen of the Squalus—Theodore Jacobs, Charles A. Powell, Warren W. Smith, jr., and Arthur L. Booth.

"They took more punishment than any of us on the bottom," Naquin said, as he told how they expended their dwindling energy tapping out messages on the vessel's hull.

The court recited in alphabetical order the names of each of the dead members of the Squalus' crew, asking after each name: "Was his death the result of misconduct in any way or did he violate any law or regulation just prior to his death?"

To the first name, Naquin answered "No," and to the others he chopped "same answer."

It was evident the inquiry board was not ready to assume the Squalus disaster was caused by an open air-induction valve until she had been drydocked and examined when Capt. Munroe read into the records the 19-year-old recommendation.

He had asked Naquin directly whether he thought such a device as was suggested would have prevented the accident, and when the Squalus' commander answered directly that it would have, the court declared the exchange was based on an assumption, not yet proved, and the question and reply were rephrased less specifically.

Ventilators Vulunerable

Discussing the valves by which air is taken in when a submarine is on the surface, Naquin asserted that if any one of four pipes was ruptured by a depth bomb or mine the entire ventilating system of the ship would be flooded. He recommended that "automatic, instantaneous, snap action" equipment for closing these pipes be installed in the future.

However, he declined to concede directly that a mechanical fault in the main air induction valve had caused his ship to plunge to the bottom on May 23.

Naquin said he had "no fault to find" with the resuce operations which saved 33 of the vessel's 59 men, except that "some corrective measures are in order to prevent the downhaul cable (of the rescue bell) from fouling, as we of the fourth trip experienced."

He referre dto the dramatic incident when, on the final trip of the rescue bell, he and seven other survivors were suspended for more than four hours some 70 feet below the surface.

Wants Better Communications

Naquin also recommended some improved method of communications, pointing out that after the telephone cable first sent to the surface had broken, the men trapped below "had no means of communication other than tapping on the hull, which required great force and expenditure of energy in order that our messages might be heard."

Naquin detailed the preparations for the final dive. Lieut. J. C. Nichols, of Chicago, was in charge of the forward part of the ship, and Lieut. William T. Doyle, of Baltimore, second in command, was the diving officer.

"I did not personally witness reports to the diving officers," Naquin told the court, "but I am told both Nichols and Patterson reported to Lieut. Doyle that their compartments were ready for rigging . . .

"We got down to 50 feet and I had time to comment that the dive was better than earlier dives and then I walked over to the periscope, and it was not until then that any pressure was felt in our ears, and reports were received of trouble aft."

Naquin did not describe the dramatic moments that followed—what happened during the 190 foot descent to ocean floor and the long hours that followed before help arrived. He explained this part of his story had been told to the court yesterday, before reporters were admitted.

Naquin said adjustments had been necessary on the main induction valve, but added that the equipment in question had been completely dismantled and re-assembled, and that ten dives had been made after this, without trouble of any kind.

". . . Certain work was done on the induction valve . . . because of the failure of this latch to hold open the valve. This work was done. On our return to the yard the gear was completely disassembled and inspected by the yard personnel and myself."

Waives Rights

In response to question, Naquin said he believed he had an "exceptional crew," and that his officers were "all well and qualified for their duties" on the day of the final dive.

Naquin began his testimony by waiving his rights as a defendant.

"I do not desire counsel," he told the board, after swearing, with his left hand on a Bible, to tell all of the truth.

Nevertheless, he head a statement declaring he reserved the right to challenge anything that might be said, to question witnesses and to decline to answer questions he felt might be incriminating. Officers explained Naquin could have declined to appear before the board.

His testimony was prefaced by a statement that he felt no blame was attached to him in the sinking and the subsequent abondonment of his command.

The skipper of the Squalus testified the craft was on a trial basis at the time of the mishap and that more men than usual were on board for that reason. He declared, however, that "the best men were picked for the trial crews and they were so stationed on the 23rd of May."

Dr. H. C. Kinner Named To Pharmacy Board

4-H Delegates Discuss College Pro and Con

Buy a Farm and Be 4 Years Ahead or Learn Better Methods?

A discussion by delegates to the National Four-H Club Camp here yesterday of the question "Why Go to College?" brought these arguments, for and against:

"It costs about $2,000 to go to college and with that much money a young man can buy a farm and be four years ahead of his collegiate competitor. So why go?"

"But the collegian would be a better farmer for his book learning."

"College graduates don't want to go back to the farm. They want 'white-collar' jobs."

"The farm youth of America should go to college with the idea of coming back to farms and making them better places on which to live."

Other Four-H Club activities yesterday included a visit to the National Museum, reception for the girls at the Latvian Legation, and presentation of a gavel to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace by Winona Francke, of Nebraska; Richard Hamilton, Connecticut; Hubert Blanchard, jr., Arkansas, and Maxine Lynch, Washington.

Wood for the head of the gavel was taken from the White House following the fire of Christmas Eve, 1909. The handle was made from a walnut tree at Mount Vernon that was felled by a storm.

Northern Mill Owners Urge Uniform Pay

Fight Differential for South; New England Fears Migration

By the Associated Press.

Northern cotton mill owners, employing nearly 100,000 workers, appealed yesterday for a universal minimum wage to protect their industry from Southern competition.

Russell T. Fisher, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacurers, representing 88 mills in New England, New York and New Jersey, opposed a wage differential sought by a majority of Southern mills.

He told Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the wage-hour law, the North supported a 32½ cents an hour wage order for the industry, which Federal officials estimated would affect 175,000 employes. Of this number 125,000 are employed in Southern cotton plants.

"Between the two regions," Fisher declared, "there is no substantial difference in transportation costs, living costs, production costs or other similar factors."

Southern spokesmen for the industry, however, contend they are at a disadvantage with the North on freight rates and that living costs are lower in their section than in the North, thus meriting a wage differential. They contend the textile industry committee, which recommended adoption of the wage order by July 1, failed to give "adequate consideration" to a possible wage differential which existed under NRA.

Fisher asserted there was a slight differential in favor of the South in transporting raw cotton to the mills and "no differential in favor of either region from the mill to the point of consumption."

The opposition of most Southern mill operators will be presented next week at Atlanta, Ga., at a public hearing. Meanwhile several attorneys for the American Cotton Manufacturers Association and the Southern States' Industrial Council, in questioning witnesses, have indicated they would base their opposition chiefly on transportation and living costs.

A representative of Gov. Raymon E. Baldwin, of Connecticut, said migration of the textile indusry to the South had left behind only "ghost towns." He was Joseph M. Tone, former labor commissioner of the State. He attributed the migration to lower wages in the South.

Mayor Walter A. Griffin, Lawrence, Mass., advocated the proposed wage minimum.

"There are no cotton plants left in our city," Griffin said, "and we are threatened with the loss of a rayon mill employing 800. I am afraid New England will suffer terribly if this condition is not corrected."

Representing Gov. Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire, William H. Marrow, Manchester, N. H., appealed for adoption of the wage order.

Parran Urges Health Program

Buffalo, N. Y., June 20 (AP).—Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Health Service, wants a proposed Federal health program adopted to provide for all Americans "the basic community health protection which is our first line of national defense."

His views on the program embodied in the national health bill of Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, were read to the national conference of social work tonight by D. Clifford, assistant surgeon general. Dr. Parran was absent because of the death of his father.

Asserting no federalization of health services was proposed in the program, he said the "widest latitude" would be given States in developing policies adapted to their own needs.

Witness Admits Insurance Firms Acted Together

By the United Press.

The National Monopoly Investigating Committee yesterday heard testimony that major insurance companies increased cash surrender charges on life insurance policies and reduced loan values after numerous conferences in 1933 and 1934.

William A. Hutcheson, vice president and actuary of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., New York, testified he participated in several conferences looking toward such action. He said his company's payments for cash surrender of policies were three times as large in 1933 as they had been in 1930.

As a result of these conferences, it was brought out, major companies in the New York area increased the charges, while smaller companies followed suit after other conferences involving representatives of more than 20 insurance companies.

Football Tackle Thwarts Escape Of Mental Patient

What had all the makings of a daredevil escape by a mental patient was spoiled yesterday by the presence in Judiciary Square of a passerby who once played football.

Justice Bailey denied a habeas corpus after Dr. John E. Lind, of St. Elizabeths Hospital testified the youth hated everybody, had been in 30 fights at the hospital, and was a dangerous person to be free. On the way out of court, the patient jerked away from Guard G. I. Long and sprinted for freedom, wearing leather manacles but gaining ground on the guard.

The passerby came into play near the corner, where he stepped off the pavement, measured his distance, and brought the fugitive down with a beautiful flat-footed tackle. Long took hold of the manacles, and the passerby went off without giving either his name or what team he played on.

Policeman Howard Dies at Home Of Heart Ailment

Policeman Lester A. Howard, 37, died at his home, 4909 New Hampshire avenue northwest, yesterday of a heart attack. He was attached to the hack inspector's office.

HOWARD

Howard worked Monday and that night complained to his wife of feeling ill. A short time later he became unconscious, and she called the fire rescue squad. Their efforts to revive him were futile.

He had been on the police force since 1930 and is survived by his wife, his mother, Mrs. Cora A. Howard; three brothers, Ernest Lawrence and Joseph Howard, and three sisters, Mrs. Isabel Cooper, Mrs. Magdalene Calaman and Mrs. James Waters.

William Kinghorne Funeral Rites To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for William Kinghorne, 84, who died Monday at 1343 Park road northwest after a short illness, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at Hine's funeral chapel, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Kinghorne came to Washington in 1927 from Laurel, Md., where he had lived for about 18 years. A native of London, England, he came to this country 55 years ago. He was a glsas manufacturer until his retirement in 1927, and specialized in cut glass ware.

He leaves a son, Joseph William Kinghorne, of this city.

U. S. Air Line Travel Reaches All-Time Peak

Chicago, June 20 (AP).—Air line travel reached an all-time peak during May, the Air Transport Association of America announced today, with domestic air lines flying 37,407,080 revenue passenger miles.

The figure represented an increase of 36.6 per cent over May, 1938, and 21 per cent over April of this year.

Francis J. White Dies; Former Postoffice Guard

Francis J. White, of 68 K street northwest, District postoffice guard, died yesterday at Providence Hospital following a long illness. He was 65.

Mr. White was crippled in 1933 when he partially balked a postoffice holdup by six bandits who wounded him twice.

He was a member of Holy Name Society of St. Aloysius' Church, St. Vincent de Paul Society, Third Order of St. Dominic, Third Order of St. Francis, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus and Manresan Retreatants.

He had served 30 years with the postoffice before retiring last November. Previously he had seen service as a Marine.

Surviving are Mrs. James L. Norris, of Fayetteville, N. C., a niece; and two nephews, Ernest and Byron White, both of Washington.

Solemn high mass will be held Friday at 9 a. m. in St. Aloysius' Church, North Capitol and I streets. Burial, with full military honors, will be held in Arlington Cemetery.

Stark Is Silent On Resignation Of WPA Chief

Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri left for home last night without disclosing what he told President Roosevelt with reference to Matthew Murray, works progress administrator for Missouri, who yesterday resigned his second position as head of the Kansas City public works department.

Asked if he had requested Murray's removal, Stark smiled and replied:

"That's a Federal job. I cannot comment on it."

But the President, at his press conference soon afterward, said he and Stark had discussed the Missouri WPA situation and that Murray's name was mentioned.

The Governor expressed satisfaction, over Murray's resignation as head of the public works department in Kansas City, but added that that did not change the situation as to his unacceptability as State WPA administrator.

Adm. Peoples Would Quit Treasury Post

Nation's Biggest Buyer Would Return to Navy For Final Year

By the Associated Press.

Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples—the Nation's biggest buyer—has asked to be relieved of his duties as director of the procurement division of the Treasury on July 1, an official said last night.

Peoples has been director since the division was organized in 1933 and in nearly six years has spent billions of dollars as the Government's No. 1 purchasing agent.

Under the Government reorganization plan which becomes effective July 1, the public building branch of the procurement division will be transferred to the new Federal Works Agency, leaving only the branch of supplies in the division.

Word of Peoples' impending return to the Navy—he is 63 and has one year to serve before retirement—brought reports that Capt. H. E. Collins, assistant director in charge of supplies, would succeed him as director.

Rear Admiral Peoples was paymaster general of the Navy and chief of the bureau of supplies and accounts when "borrowed" November 21, 1933, for the Treasury post. He developed the Navy's purchase system, standardized the fuel system, and pioneered in establishing the Navy standards specifications system. He initiated similar efficiency in the procurement division.

In 38 years' service with the Navy, the 63-year-old officer won a reputation as one of the Navy's outstanding "businessmen."

Pa. Jury Uncovers Pay Without Work

Harrisburg, Pa., June 20 (AP).—Card-playing, football and a pay-check without any work attached were some of the attractions for men employed on Pennsylvania highway projects shortly before the November, 1938, election, the Brownmiller pay-roll padding jury was told today.

The State, trying former Highways Secretary Roy E. Brownmiller on a charge of malfeasance, presented a dozen witnesses who said they obtained highway jobs through Democratic politicians and drew pay checks without working.

District Attorney Carl B. Shelley said he would call former Governor Earle tomorrow.

Roosevelt Attends Little Cabinet Dinner

In strictly "off the record" atmosphere, President Roosevelt "ate out" last night at the nearby Oxon Hill (Md.) home of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

The occasion was the annual "Little Cabinet" dinner for the Chief Executive, featuring a buffet supper.

Heads of some independent agencies of the Government were invited along with Assistant Secretaries and Undersecretaries of the ten regular departments.

10,000 Firms Ready For War Orders, Ad Men Told

New York, June 20 (AP).—There are 10,000 industrial plants in the United States prepared to start the manufacture of munitions immediately, Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, told the convention of the Advertising Federation of America today.

He said the War Department surveyed the capacity of industry to produce munitions of war, representatives of the department visiting more than 20,000 plants.

"We found facilities to manufacture practically all of our military needs," he added. "As a result of these surveys, we selected 10,000 plants to which we gave definite schedules of production. If tomorrow were 'M-Day' (mobilization day), we could turn to these plants, give them an order and they would begin at once to manufacture munitions."

Cummings, President Discuss Prospects in '40

Former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, a close personal friend of President Roosevelt, lunched with the Chief Executive yesterday. Cummings said later he and the President had an "old-fashioned talk" about many things, including "political prospects in 1940," but, like Mr. Roosevelt, he declined to comment on a third term.

Square-Rigger Arrives as Flying Boat Is Christened

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 20.—A spectacle rare in New York Harbor was presented today by the square-rigged Norwegian schoolship Christian Radich when she stood up the bay under full canvas.

The sight of the oldest form of ocean transport contrasted strangely with the ceremony that took place at the Battery just as the ship arrived—the christening of American Export Airlines Consolidated flying boat, which the company will use to survey a transatlantic air route.

Woman Held on Dope Charges Escapes

Ruby Olivia Nelson, 24, colored, arrested in a series of narcotics raids by police and Treasury agents last week, escaped last night from the Police Women's Bureau.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, bureau head, who said the woman disappeared shortly after being taken from her cell to see a visitor, ordered an investigation.

River, Harbor Bill Sent to Floor

The Senate Commerce Committee approved and sent to the Senate yesterday the bill authorizing expenditure of $407,855,600 in 41 States for waterways, flood control, power development and other purposes.

The measure involved 127 projects and nearly five times as much money as when it passed the House.

Proponents were confident of Senate passage because the bill included projects for so many States. Only States for which no expenditures were provided were Utah, Arizona, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Nevada and Montana.

House Bloc Forms To Fight Passage Of Railroad Bill

Delay of railroad legislation in the present session of Congress was threatened yesterday when a bipartisan group in the House announced formation of a steering committee to fight the Wheeler-Lea transportation bill, particularly provisions which give the Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction over water-carriers.

Announcement of the organization was made in the House by Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, who inserted in the record a statement signed by the group including a letter by Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War, taking a similar view.

The steering committee is composed of Representative Warren; Mansfield, Texas, chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee; Bland, Virginia, chairman of the Merchant Marine Committee, Kleberg, Texas; Whittington, Mississippi; Harrington, Iowa, and Disney, Oklahoma, Democrats, and Culkin, New York; Oliver, Maine, and Pittenger, Minnesota, Republicans.

Fechner To Remain With CCC

Urges Permanent Organization in Round Table Broadcast

Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, yesterday urged that the organization be put on a permanent basis at the same time that it was learned he had abandoned his recent intention to resign.

Fechner's plea for passage of a bill approved by the House Committee on Labor, extending his organization's life five years beyond its July 1, 1940, expiration date, came in a round table radio broadcast sponsored by the American Youth Commission.

He said, "We hear that no branch of Government activity has received more general approval from the public than the CCC. As for the youth of the country, their faith in the camps has been amply demonstrated by the fact that during the recent enrollments there have been from three to five applications for every place available. . . . It seems very unlikely to me that all youths will find jobs in private industry in anything like the immediate future."

Fechner's decision to retain the directorship followed a conference between him and President Roosevelt last week, during which, it was assumed, Fechner was assured that the President's reorganization plan, which transfers the CCC to the new Federal Works Agency, will not circumscribe the work or administration of the camps.

Immediately following the approval of the reorganization plan it was known that Fechner indicated he was "very worried" about the CCC's future status as part of a larger agency and had definitely planned to resign.

Suffrage Meeting Set for Tonight

The District Suffrage Association will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building to discuss "the helpless condition of Washington residents and the arbitrary attitude of the Congress in denying them the right to be heard."

Taxes, milk, asphalt, public welfare conditions, and "anything else concerning the present District of Columbia government anyone wants to talk about" have been scheduled for discussion.

Mrs. Williams Named on Board

Mrs. Velma G. Williams, 2700 Georgia avenue northwest, was yesterday appointed by the District judges to the Board of Education to succeed Mrs. Virginia R. McGuire, whose resignation is effective June 30.

Mrs. Williams, mother of four boys now in the public schools, is a native of Mississippi, where she taught school for ten years. She is president of the Pleasant Plains Civic Association and first vice president of the Federation of Civic Associations. She organized and was the first president of the Monroe Parent-Teacher Association.

The new Board of Education member has appeared frequently before the ABC board to oppose granting of liquor licenses in locations near schools, and has appeared before Congressional committees urging added school appropriations.

Solicitor General Jackson Defends New Deal Before Business Clubs

Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, one of the "younger statesmen" of the New Deal's inner councils, yesterday gave a third-term talk to end all third-term talks when he denied the existence of a third-term issue.

"The first term was canceled by the courts," he said, smiling, to the laughter of a luncheon hall full of delegates to the American Business Clubs' national convention at the Hotel Mayflower.

Principal speaker at the main event on the day's program, Jackson enthusiastically defended the Roosevelt program. Far from veering away from the Constitution, the Administration has striven to apply its spirit in the Nation's laws, he said, pointing out that "for the first time in history we are recognizing as a national concern the welfare of the people," in accordance with the general welfare clause of the Constitution.

Addressing approximately 400 delegates and their wives, the Solicitor General quoted Alfred M. Landon, Republican standard bearer in 1936, in support of his argument that proper regulation of business by government is necessary.

PWA and WPA he described as "stopgaps," whose function is to play for time until permanent solutions of economic problems are found.

"In the last few years we have gone back to the Constitution, not gone against it," Jackson declared, stating that the document was framed by young business men most of whom were under 35, comparable with the membership of the American Business Clubs.

At a morning business meeting, the convention nominated for its national presidency, Joseph C. Monaghan, of Washington, general chairman of the assembly, and Robert Bacon, of Champaign, Ill. The election will be held today.

Paul S. Anderson, president of the Washington club, presided at the luncheon, which was followed by sightseeing.

120 Women, Children Flee From Tientsin

Japanese General Says Britain Has Lost Neutral Rights

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin (Wednesday), June 21.—A group of 120 British women and children began an exodus today from Tientsin's besieged British concession as the second week of Japanese blockade began amid signs of unrelenting pressure.

Gen. Gen Sugiyama, commander of Japan's forces in North China, charged Britain had forfeited her rights as a neutral by what he called policies designed to assist Gen. Chiang Kai-shek.

Sugiyama declared his forces would follow a "resolute" policy toward the Tientsin British concession until Britain recognizes Japan's "new order in East Asia" and cooperates in establishing it.

Official British reports in Tokyo said 1,000 women and children were being evacuated, preparatory to "an indefinite period of resistance" to the blockade. The men were remaining, it was said.

Other Nationals Invaded

Since the total British population in both the British and French concessions is only 1,500, it appeared the evacuation plan called for removal of women and children of other nationalities as well. The total foreign population of the two areas is about 5,000).

Some of the British refugees boarded a steamer last night and arrangements were completed for the whole party to leave today.

Most of them, it was pointed out, had planned previously to go to summer homes on the coast, but had been delayed by the blockade imposed by the Japanese eight days ago after British officials had rejected Japanese demands for custody of four Chinese accused of killing a local official.

Second Warship Arrives

The 1,045-ton British escort vessel Sandwich arrived last night to reinforce the H. M. S. Lowestoft which is remaining indefinitely at the British Bund. The Sandwich, of the same type as the Lowestoft but heavier and more modern, mounts multiple-fire anti-aircraft guns and .50-calibre machine-guns in addition to regular 4.5-inch guns fore and aft.

The food situation behind electrified barricades with which the Japanese have ringed the British and bordering French concessions remained unchanged despite Sugiyama's statement that the Japanese would "do everything to facilitate the entry of food."

Wires Carry Death Charge

Japanese patrol boats in the Hai still were preventing all sampans from landing food in the British concession and Domei, Japanese news agency, reported that vegetable growers outside the British area had agreed on a "spontaneous boycott" of the area.

The 1,500 Britons virtually imprisoned within the concession, meanwhile, faced the loss of vital public services as Chinese employes began quitting their jobs under threats of death to their families if they remained at work for the British.

The Japanese refused to disclose the voltage and amperage carried by the wires, but authorities of the French concession said they were informed the wires carried a charge sufficient to cause instant death.

Japanese official circles predicted that British overtures shortly would break the impasse.

WARDMAN'S OWN ROMANCE: Frances Coyne and Francis Tigani met at a dance at Wardman Park Hotel, their courtship developed amid an aura of Wardman collegiate parties. It's hinted that Francis proposed to Frances (don't get those names in reverse, Mr. Printer, please) at Wardman.

Tonight the wedding reception of Francis and Frances will be held in the Garden Room of Wardman. The wedding date was even postponed so that the reception could be held in the same spot where the bride and bridegroom first met.

"WASHINGTON POST MARCH" ECHO: Vincent Gallagher, owner-operator of the King Cole Room, tells us that the "Washington Post March" was the only number in last week's K. C. R. "Tune Test" which everybody in the place named correctly. P. S. There's another King Cole "Tune Test" tonight. Best guesser will get two Hour Glass dinners. He can eat 'em both himself or take a girl friend.

TERRACE TREMENDOUS TONIGHT: There'll be the biggest show ever on the Shoreham Terrace tonight. You'll see the incomparable "La Paloma" tango of Woods and Bray (who leave tomorrow for Chicago's Edgewater Beach), the can-can as envisioned by luscious Peggy Seel (see pic above), toe-swing by Alma and Roland, the Woolford Dachshunds in hot-dog tricks, those "Hollywood Screams," the Missing Boys.

MOTORING SECTION: For the most eye-popping motor transport in town we nominate the yellow station wagon navigated by Pete Macias of the Lounge Riviera, and Al Norton's (Bamboo Gardens) new chariot in opalescent claret color and reputed to have every modern convenience but running water . . . Oscar of the Hi Hat has a quaint motoring peccadillo. He puts his car in the garage every fall and lets it stay there until spring. He just doesn't like going places in cold weather.

VACATION GUIDE: Wanna know where and how far you're going to travel this summer? Just ask Myrah or Lorenz, new prognosticators on the Roger Smith Powhatan Roof. There's something about your thumbs that will tell them.

FOND ADIEUX by the hundreds are being bidden to Leo, Louanna and Beverly, of the Mayfair. They'll all take off this week-end for the North. Beverly will head for Adirondacks and we're told that Leo and Louanna will probably do their warbling at an up-State New York resort this summer. The Trocadero Trio will be in on Monday.

TRICKS IN THE SPANISH: "Y Comoleva" as played by Johnny De Leon's boys in the Neptune Room.

"Say Si, Si," as sung in the Espanol by Bert Bernath in the Carlton cocktail lounge.

"Mama, Yo Quiero un Novio," now being warbled at the Madrillon by Carlos and Ramon. (It means, "Mama, I want a sweetheart.")

Spanish gypsy music as both composed and played by Maestro Harold Veo at Maryland Club Gardens. Like fireworks.

SOFT BALL CHAMPIONSHIP of the night spots is claimed by Bill Strickland's Dixieland Swingers of the Lotus. Anyway, they've won three games out of five, one to the monumental score of 22-8. . . .

FOR THE FOOD-MINDED: The "Three Hours for Lunch Club" has just been launched in the Mayflower Lounge. There'll be harp and violin music by Alfred Manning and Jack Minovich, superdelicacies by Chef Marchitelli. Calories? Bah!

At the garden-like Venezia on Dupont circle, you may enjoy tasty meals free from the shadow of parking tickets. Free parking for all the customers is the answer.

All of those acres of green vegetables and berries out at O'Donnell's Farms (former Griffith Farms) are coming into their prime. Owner Tom O'Donnell reports a crick in his back from picking strawberries.

Cocktail hour at the Rainbow Room just naturally merges into the dinner dance. You must move over to the Georgian dining room which opens on the Rainbow Room. Always plenty of gastronomic treats on the menu.

Business Credit Compromise Seen

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, nationally known economist and vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., joined with officials of the Investment Bankers Association in urging Congress to promote "sustained business recovery" by holding out some encouragement to investors.

The committee, in a previous secret session, approved a bill authorizing a national census on housing in connection with the 1940 census. Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, committee chairman, made public a letter from Hopkins recommending an appropriation of $8,500,000 for the housing census.

Suggests Liberal Revision

Hopkins stressed the need for a "complete inventory of housing facilities" as a basis for an Administration drive to revive lagging housing construction.

Ayres, in response to a question by Senator Tobey (Republican), New Hampshire, suggested that more liberal tax revision might be resorted to as a stimulant to investment, and that Securities and Exchange Commission controls over common stock issues might be eased. The commission, he declared, might "do some experimenting."

Present at the conference with Hopkins were Benjamin V. Cohen, Administration "trouble shooter" and general counsel of the National Power Policy Committee; Jerome Frank, SEC chairman; Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., head of the SEC monopoly study; Emil Schram, member of the RFC board; Claude E. Hamilton, jr., RFC general counsel; Lauchlin Currie, assistant research director of the Reserve Board, and Dr. Willard L. Thorp, economic adviser to Hopkins.

German Refugee Colony Planned in China

Owners say it—Sales prove it

Count acceleration and hill-climbing . . . count riding comfort and reliability . . . count economy of gas, oil, tires and upkeep . . . Owners say it—sales prove it—"Chevrolet is the best performer ever built!"

And the reason why Chevrolet owners give this car such high praise will become clearly evident to you the moment you drive it.

They say Chevrolet is "the best performer ever built," because it out-accelerates, out-climbs, out-performs all other economy cars—bar none!

They say Chevrolet is "the best performer ever built," because it represents the highest standard of smooth, safe, steady riding and day-in-and-day-out dependability.

They say Chevrolet is "the best performer ever built," because it gives all these results at lower cost than does any other motor car that can keep pace with it in all-round operating efficiency!

The fact that Chevrolet leads all other makes of cars in sales is mighty good evidence that it leads in performance as well. But riding beats reading! So please drive this fleet, powerful Chevrolet and prove to yourself that owners are right when they say it's "the best performer ever built."

Japan Rejects British Protest On Blockade

Government to Back Military Command In Tientsin Policy

Tokyo, (Wednesday) June 21 (INS).—Japan has rejected Great Britain's latest official protest against the blockade of the British concession at Tientsin, the authoritative newspaper Asahi Shimbun said today.

Foreign Minister Arita, the Tokyo newspaper added, has decided that the Japanese government will support the anti-British attitude of the Japanese military command at Tientsin in all its measures taken to enforce Nippon's policy in China.

This decision by Arita was communicated to Britain yesterday during a talk the Foreign Minister had with British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie, Asahi Shimbun declared.

The newspaper's assertions were read with wide interest in Tokyo's foreign circles since it may be the first indication of the attitude taken by Emperor Hirohito himself toward the Far Eastern crisis which flared with the Japanese blockade of the International concession at Tientsin last week.

Arita called on the Emperor in the imperial palace yesterday before seeing Craigie.

As a result of the newspaper's statements foreigners believed Arita may have informed the Emperor of the support to be given to the Japanese Army's persistent demands that British dominating interests in China be reduced unless all "pro Chiang Kai-Shek acts by Britons are immediately abandoned."

Just preceding his imperial visit, Arita gave the Japanese cabinet a complete report on the situation.

The British Ambassador for the third time in a week had asked that the Japanese government put an end to discrimination against British residents at Tientsin.

It was reported Britain was ready to agree to any reasonable suggestions for settlement of the Tientsin crisis if Tokyo was willing to deal with the affair as "a local incident."

If Japan is unwilling to "localize" its view on Tientsin, it was indicated Britain then will be obliged to resort to economic pressure against Japan.

Another significant conference yesterday was held after the Japanese foreign minister saw Hirohito. This meeting brought together Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, War Minister Gen. Seishiro Itagaki and Arita.

London Presses Soviet Pact

London, June 20 (INS).—With the Tientsin crisis stirring anxiety throughout Britain, the government tonight sent new instructions to its special emissary at Moscow to rush conclusion of the proposed Anglo-French-Soviet mutual defense pact.

Further concessions to the U. S. S. R.'s demand that any triple entente against Fascist Nazi aggression in Europe must also guarantee the Baltic states, were contained in messages sent by the office of Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax to William Strang, emissary to Moscow.

The government, it was learned, has suggested that Strang go so far as to guarantee military aid to all of Russia's neighbors without naming them in th epact. Britain will go to their aid, under the suggested terms, whether or not these unnamed neighbors resist aggression and if the security of Russia is menaced.

Earlier, the foreign affairs committee of the cabinet met and discussed the Far Eastern situation with special emphasis on the possibility of a quick solution of the Japanese blockade of Tientsin. No official announcement was issued, but government members made no attempt to hide their gravity over the situation in China.

Berlin, June 20 (AP).—Germany's official news agency, DNB, tonight reiterated the statement of German newspapers that "the question of a written pledge by England to help Russia in event of a conflict with Japan is the obstacle hindering British-Russian negotiations."

DNB denied, however, that the papers had reported the mater of a guarantee of Russia's Far Eastern borders was holding up the negotiations. Tass, official Soviet news agency, quoted German newspapers as saying Russia was asking such a guarantee and added such a report was "absolutely groundless."

Concern Held "Natural"

Tientsin, June 20 (INS).—Japan's military command at Tientsin declared today they believed it "natural" that the United States should express its concern over the grave crisis and for its nationals in Tientsin.

A military spokesman referred pointedly to the statement of Secretary of State Hull dispatched to the Far East yesterday.

The statement added:

"It is hardly necessary to say that Japan could not accept the British formula if it is designed to settle the pending question in an isolated fashion. "The Japanese military authorities want nothing more than Britain's full cooperation in safeguarding peace and order in North China by revising her attitude unconditionally."

Gen. Monteiro Inspects U. S. Armed Forces

Marshall said Gen. Monteiro was impressed with the American bluejackets aboard the Nashville. He said he spoke repeatedly of their magnificent physiques, alertness and discipline, and "thoroughly enjoyed" a "show" put on by the crew on the trip, "hill-billy" and Navy songs and a jousting bout by sailors on beams wielding pillows. The Brazilians attended the movies aboard ship every night, it was said.

Arriving off Annapolis Roads a little after noon, Gen. Monteiro was brought ashore aboard the admiral's barge, the Anita Clay. There on the small, crowded wharf at the Naval Academy the general was greeted by Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent at Annapolis. The Marine guard presented arms, the band gave four ruffles and flourishes and the Brazilian anthem and 17 guns boomed out in salute to the visiting dignitary.

Admiral Brown introduced Monteiro to Gen. Malin Craig, American chief of staff, and Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle during the salute. The guns made them lean forward to shout in each other's ears, a somewhat unnecessary movement, as Gen. Monteiro speaks no English and all conversations were carried on through Lieut. Col. Lehman W. Miller, American Army officer assigned as aide to the visitor.

The stocky Brazilian army chief, clad in a white uniform, gray cap and black belt, was then taken on a tour of the Naval Academy.

After a reception at Admiral Brown's quarters, Gen. Monteiro gave his first interview with the American press. He said that Brazilians have a great admiration for this country and that his army has a feeling of "deep comradeship" for the American Army.

Traveling at 50 miles an hour, the party headed for Fort Mead. There the party was greeted with a 17-gun salute and a review of tanks, foot soldiers and motorized units. Col. Gilbert Allen, commander of the post, brought out the Army's newest weapon, the .37 mm. antitank gun and four companies of light tanks, all less than a year old. They were the 9-ton vehicles which escorted the British sovereigns and President Somoza of Nicaragua into Washington.

Gen. Monteiro commented on the "fine appearance of the troops to Col. Allen, and expressed much interest in the 700 R. O. T. C. students there. After the reception the party went on to Washington. Four Cavalry combat cars joined the procession at the District line, and escorted it to the Brazilian Embassy at Thirtieth and Massachusetts avenue, passing the Capitol and White House en route.

At the embassy, Gen. Monteiro inspected his guard of honor, the first squadron of the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer, Va., with a mounted band, and a color guard dressed in the colorful Mexican War uniforms of the regiment.

Gen. Monteiro, however, did not clear up the question of whether he will visit Germany in the near future. Through interpreters, he told reporters that he had received invitations to tour the Reich, Italy and Great Britain, but that no decision would be reached until he went back to Brazil next month.

In view of recent efforts of totalitarian states to cultivate Latin America, State Department officials here were gratified when Gen. Monteiro passed up his European invitations to come first to the United States. The satisfaction at this diplomatic coup, however, was lessened somewhat when it was learned the other bids had not been declined and there was a chance the sight of the powerful military machines of Europe might dim the picture received here.

The diplomatic background of world politics, however, had no place in the friendly and rather informal military welcome extended the Brazilian mission by the Army and Navy high command.

Today, the military guests will visit the battlefield at Gettysburg, Pa., return for an afternoon reception and attend a dinner given by Gen. Craig.

To Take Profit Out of War

London, June 20.—The British government, which recently conscripted a portion of the country's manpower for possible wartime service, took a major step today toward conscription of wealth for the same purpose by announcing 60 per cent excess profits duty on all firms "substantially engaged" on rearmament contracts whose annual turnover in that respect exceeds £200,000 (about $940,000).

As a measure intended to "take the profit out of war," the new tax, to be known as the armaments profits duty, empowers Leslie Burgin, minister-designate of supply, to declare which firms are liable to the tax.

The tax will be in force for three years, as of March 31, last. It may be extended if the government's huge rearmament program has not been completed in that period.

Nazis Open New Danzig 'Offensive'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 20.—Germany today started troop maneuvers involving 1,500,000 men and rushed completion of fortifications along the Polish border, leading observers to anticipate an early showdown in the Danzig dispute.

Informed Nazis asserted that the week-end speeches in Danzig by Propaganda Minister Goebbels, who asserted that Danzig's restoration to the Reich was inevitable, marked the beginning of a "new offensive" for a settlement with Poland.

The troops being moved throughout the country for maneuvers will remain under arms throughout the summer.

It was understood Reichsfuehrer Hitler and government officials were devoting most of their attention to Polish-German relations.

Berlin, June 20 (AP).—Germany supports with "open sympathy," the efforts of the Arabian peoples to retain their independence and to limit their exploitation by foreign powers, it was stated tonight by Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, semi-official news service of the foreign office.

A BATTERY OF "SMOKERS" used in the impartial laboratory tests to determine the actual burning time of 16 of the largest-selling brands of cigarettes. Highly trained scientists and special equipment assured scientifically accurate control in these tests. Camels (shown here under test) proved to be 25% slower-burning than the average of the 15 other brands tested, giving Camel smokers the equivalent of 5 extra smokes per pack!

CAMEL'S expensive tobaccos, so inexpensive to smoke—is welcome news to millions who are keen for the smoking thrill of finer tobaccos! Naturally, a slower-burning cigarette, Camel, gives more and better smoking for the money. And now the impartial research of a leading laboratory proves that Camels burn far slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands. Here are 3 cigarette facts discovered by this scientific group:

1. Camels were found to contain MORE TOBACCO BY WEIGHT than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.
2. CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!
3. In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

SMOKING IS BELIEVING!

Right now—as the summer season of extra smoking starts—begin enjoying the cigarette of extra smokes! Everyone can afford the coolness, the true mildness, the ripe, delicate taste and fragrance of smoking pleasure at its best. Sign Of Confidence

One of the most revealing evidences of the disturbed state of the world is afforded by the mounting totals of foreign investments in the United States. By the end of 1938, the Department of Commerce estimates, these holdings amounted to $7,883,000,000—an increase of $847,000,000 during the year. Nearly half this gain, however, is due to a rise in the value of investment securities; the rest, to an increase in short-term balances.

In recent years there has been an unprecedented inflow of capital funds from abroad, resulting in net capital acquisitions of approximately $4,000,000,000 in little more than four years. When it is remembered that during this period, business activity has been below normal, and business sentiment prevailingly pessimistic, the confidence with which foreigners entrust their funds to us seems rather surprising.

However, reports indicate that a large proportion of foreign-owned securities are listed on the New York Stock Exchange and doubtless have a high degree of marketability. Thus, they could be liquidated at short notice and withdrawn as could short-term balances. Nevertheless, the fact that foreigners now have approximately $5,700,000,000 in so-called long-term American investments, apart from short-term banking balances, indicates that outlets for capital funds are not so limited or so unsatisfactory as is sometimes alleged.

When conditions abroad become more settled and capital temporarily held here for safekeeping is withdrawn, we may be confronted by difficult problems of adjustment. For a heavy outflow of capital would entail an outward movement of gold and an accompanying liquidation of domestic security issues that would have a deflationary effect.

However, these troubles are in the future. For the present, we are concerned with the inflationary dangers arising from the great volume of excess reserves built up largely by the heavy gold inflow that has accompanied the flight of foreign capital to this country.

Why Worry?

Strong opposition has developed in the Senate to prolongation of the President's power to reduce the gold content of the dollar still further. Yet, somehow, the arguments against devaluation which once seemed so powerful have lost much of their driving force. That is not because the action taken in deliberately devaluing the dollar to raise the domestic price level seems any more justified today than it did when the experiment was launched. It is due, rather, to the widespread realization that devaluation is a relatively impotent and altogether unsatisfactory price-raising device.

One is inclined to challenge Senator Adams' assertion that the fear of dollar devaluation is a bar to prosperity. At the present moment there are many more important factors hindering business recovery. Among them mention should first be made of the unbalanced budget, which is a potential source of monetary inflation infinitely more disturbing to contemplate than a limited change in the so-called gold content of an irredeemable paper dollar. It should also be remembered that the President possesses numerous inflationary powers over the currency that might be employed to raise prices, such as the power to issue $3,000,000,000 of greenbacks, and to revalue silver for currency purposes.

Senator Wagner, who has been leading the fight for retention of the President's power to devalue the dollar, views it merely as a weapon to brandish over foreign governments that might try to take trade away from our exporters or invade domestic markets by depreciating their currencies. This is a significant indication of a loss of faith in the positive efficacy of devaluation. The same argument was advanced by Secretary Morgenthau when he recommended prolongation of the power to devalue. We may assume, therefore, that only in a very pressing emergency would use be made of the authorization.

Those who are leading the fight to deprive the President of the power to devalue the dollar apparently do not worry about the fact that the Treasury has the power under permanent legislation to alter the price paid for gold. Hence in any case, the fate of the dollar is in the hands of the Administration as Senator Townsend recently pointed out. So why worry?

Tientsin, A Test

Secretary Hull's statement regarding the position of the United States on the Tientsin crisis should serve a very useful purpose at this time. It should help destroy whatever illusion may have existed in Japan that the United States is or can be indifferent to what is going on in the beleaguered North China metropolis.

This country had nothing to do with the original dispute out of which the present grave situation at Tientsin arose. That dispute involved Great Britain and Japan alone. But the United States, as Mr. Hull points out, "is concerned, however, with the nature and significance of subsequent developments, in their broader aspects, coupled with other past and present acts and utterances in other parts of China."

The point is that the blockade by Japan of the British and French concessions at Tientsin is no isolated development. It is but the latest in a long succession of attacks on foreign rights and interests in China against which the United States, as well as Great Britain and France, have protested.

Thus last October, to go back no further, the Government, through Ambassador Grew at Tokyo, addressed a sharp note to Japan calling attention to repeated violations by that country of the Open Door policy to which Japan is formally committed. And last New Year's Eve the United States protested against the "unjust and unwarranted" actions of Japan in imposing restrictions on the movements and activities of American nationals in China.

In fact, even while Japan is, at the present moment, going out of its way to treat Americans at Tientsin with kid gloves, no similar solicitude is being shown by Japan toward American nationals and American interests elsewhere in China. Yesterday, for instance, the United States again found it necessary to protest Japan's continued bombings of American properties in China and to make representations regarding some of the things the Japanese are doing at Kulangsu. The International Settlement is there undergoing a blockade less dramatic in nature but no different in kind from the blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin.

It is practically certain that if the Japanese succeed in having their way at Tientsin, the pressure tactics they have been employing during the past week to bring Great Britain into line will be employed elsewhere in China, notably at Shanghai, where the foreign stake is greatest, and not only against the British but against all other foreigners as well. The outcome of the Tientsin struggle, therefore, may determine whether foreigners will henceforth be permitted to live and trade in China only on the sufferance of Japan.

This fact is clearly understood in London as it is in Washington, Paris and Tokyo. That is why the British government, harassed though it is by a grave situation in Europe, has so far shown no disposition to surrender to Japan. And it is for the same reason that Secretary Hull has hastened to deny American disinterestedness in the Tientsin crisis. At Tientsin the Chinese chestnuts of all the Western democracies are in the fire.

Seeing Red

Sometimes a handicap, by inducing extra care, may make for efficiency and safety. Such appears to be the conclusion reached by Dr. Lowell S. Selling, of Detroit, who told the American Medical Association, meeting in St. Louis recently, that the fact that a man could not distinguish between red and green was no good reason for refusing to give him a license to drive an automobile.

The man who is color-blind, he said, identifies the stop and go lights by their position and by the movement of other cars and he, perforce, has to keep his wits about him.

Dr. Selling bases his conclusions on the result of an examination of 716 drivers in his home city. Of this number one man was totally color-blind, 39 red-green blind, and 10 partially red-green blind. And he was helped to his conclusion by the percentage in each class of those who received tickets for passing a red light. The most careless were those with normal vision.

And there the matter stands. All Dr. Selling has to do now is to convince the safety engineers.

Apes And Men

Maybe Darwin was unwittingly right when he named one of his great books, "The Descent of Man." For in view of all that has happened during these last years, the easy assumption of man's superiority over the ape from whom he presumably evolved is now somewhat open to question.

Out of South Africa comes the story of the discovery of a veritable "Tarzan," a 12-year-old boy who had been reared by a family of baboons. It is another case where truth has gone fiction one better.

The case, if the facts are verified, should offer an interesting study for anthropologists. But for the layman its moral lies in another field. At times like these, when man's cruelty to man is having increasingly tragic results, it is a relief to note that the anthropoids have taken in and raised a stranger from another species as one of their own.

The contrast suggests that rational powers and rational behavior do not always accompany each other. It is the baboons, who in this instance, have set an example in humanity which men can follow to their advantage.

Grace Abbott

The death of Grace Abbott, professor of public welfare administration at the University of Chicago and former head of the U. S. Children's Bureau, brings to an untimely close a distinguished career of public service.

Few men and women possess the qualities that enable them to function both as effective crusaders for social betterment and as capable administrators. Miss Abbott was one of the rare individuals who could do both. Her zeal as a reformer was tempered by the restraint that comes from having a trained mind and a disciplined imagination.

As director of the Children's Bureau during the formative years from 1921 to 1934, Miss Abbott's name became known to literally millions of households interested in the problems of child welfare. Her efforts were directed constantly toward improving and expanding the statistical and informational services of the organization and establishing closer contact with the States and local communities. While engaged in this exacting work, she served as a member of numerous private committees and governmental bodies at home, and on various occasions represented this country at international conferences dealing with the problems of women and children.

Miss Abbott's competence as a bureau head and her broad vision of the developmental task that awaited her as chief of the Children's Bureau were due, to some extent, to her varied experiences as a social worker and her expert knowledge of governmental organization and administration. Before entering the Federal service, for instance, she had been director of the Immigrants' Protective League of Chicago and executive secretary of the State immigration commissions of Massachusetts and Illinois. In this capacity she became especially interested in the children of immigrants and the difficulties encountered in adjusting them to an alien environment.

When Miss Abbott retired voluntarily from the public service five years ago, it was to take up another kind of work for which she was ideally fitted—that of training others to enter a field in which she had labored with such conspicuous success. After becoming associated with the University of Chicago, she continued to serve the public as teacher, editor of the Social Service Review, and author of a recently published authoritative study, "The Child and the State."

Her death deprives the country of an outstanding citizen, honored for what she has achieved and doubly regretted because she was not given time to make the fuller contribution of which she was capable.

A Touch Of Sun

The action of the District Commissioners in approving pith helmets for Washington's traffic policemen is a refreshing bit of realism in a town where that quality is all too often conspicuous by its absence.

Take Washington's summer climate, for instance. One would have to go to Singapore or Sourabaya or Darkest Africa to find its equivalent in debilitating heat and enervating mugginess. But in those far-off places men have learned to adjust themselves to the forbidding environment.

They realize they are in the tropics and dress accordingly. But Washingtonians have not wholly given up pretending that the District is, as the maps have it, in the temperate zone.

Most citizens of our fair town have not yet taken to the pith helmet, the knee-length shorts, the tie-less shirt and other habiliments which help make life livable in admittedly hot climes. They swelter so as not to make liars out of the geographers. But they swelter in vain. It is time for Washingtonians to doff their more cumbersone clothes together with their climatic illusions. The D. C. police may show the way.

Why Covered Bridges?

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

One of the burning topics around St. Louis in the early autumn of 1930 was the question, Why were covered bridges covered? A Post-Dispatch editorial touched off the debate and a snowstorm of Letters from the People followed. Despite our readers' enthusiastic cooperation, the problem wasn't settled at that time. Now the controversy is raging again, this time in Ohio.

The WPA Road Planning Survey counted up and found 609 of the old-time spans surviving in that State, so naturally the question of their architectural function came up. Eight distinct theories were discovered, some plainly facetious (for instance, to serve as billboards for circus and patent medicine advertisements) and some plausible. Favorites in the latter category are: to lure skittish horses across water and to protect the bridge floor from the weather.

The Buckeye State research, however, omits one other plausible explanation, supplied by several of our readers nine years ago, to the effect that cattle, sheep and hogs, on the way to market, couldn't be driven across open water, so the camouflage was provided. Livestock is more sophisticated today, and anyhow, trucks have made herding animals to market obsolete, so the covered bridge also is passe.

However, there's no occasion for bitter feuds to arise over this debate. Isn't it possible that several of the suggested reasons influenced the bridge builders of the 1800s? Anyhow, it's a fascinating topic for these languid days when spring fever is beginning to get in its deadly ravages.

Cultural Losses

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the discussion over the many objectionable features of the House bill covering relief appropriations there is danger that public attention will not be properly directed to the great cultural losses that are threatened by the provisions which prohibit Federally sponsored arts projects after August 31, 1939.

The United States was late among the nations of the world in providing governmental patronage to the arts. This support was finally forthcoming, to a limited extent, in the Federal works programs for art, theater, music, writing and historical records.

Now, under the House bill, Federal sponsorship would be withdrawn, the theater project would be abandoned entirely, and the four arts would be permitted to survive only if they could get local political clearance and sponsorship.

Aside from the obvious difficulties of selling art to 48 separate political regimes between now and August 31, the WPA arts program has much to lose if the principle of national direction and co-ordination is sacrificed. Art and its benefits transcend State and local political boundaries, and provision should be made for adequate Federal supervision of the arts program.

The Senate can make a contribution to the cultural future of America if it removes the ban on Federally sponsored projects and permits the WPA administration itself to explore the extent to which local sponsorship may or may not be feasible. The Senate should also remove the discriminatory provision against one Federal group, the actors, by permitting the continuance of the Federal Theater Project.

Washington Secretary, Citizens Committee for Support of WPA.

Vital Supplies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1938 the United States supplied to Japan 56 per cent of all materials for war purposes imported by that country, or a total of $171,000,000 worth. From 27 countries, in all, Japan purchased a total of $306,395,950 worth of materials for war purposes. Chief among the items of purchase were automobiles, airplanes, metal-working machinery, scrap iron, tin, rubber, copper and oil. Least of the items was finished arms and ammunition.

Recently a high State Department official remarked that these figures are not significant unless we know how much of the total actually used by Japan this material represents; that is, how much also comes from Japan proper and its conquered territory.

It should be obvious to anyone even vaguely familiar with Japan's situation that these items represent materials which she does not herself possess, and without which she could not continue her program of aggression. Would Japan, by any stretch of the imagination, expend her limited and dwindling foreign exchange for anything not absolutely vital to the functioning of her war machine? HENRY H. DOUGLAS.

The Arts Projects Defended

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The other night the House wrote finis to the Federal Theater Project. On Thursday Marlene Dietrich, a naturalized German-American, sailed from New York minus several thousand dollars worth of gems left in the hands of Government agents in lieu of the income tax that she owes to Uncle Sam.

I regret that the theater project was killed by the House members, but I would like to draw a parallel between this demise and the Dietrich incident. America was not only a haven, but a gold mine, to the German star, so was not her evasion of her taxes truly a great gesture of appreciative citizenship on her part?

I do not know if, as is charged, communism was rampant in the Federal Theater Project, but I can only reflect that American-born actors have as little chance in Hollywood as a lump of sugar in a rainstorm. Numbers of the greatest "stars" are foreign-born. Imported by the magnates, they are given intensive training of all kinds, millions are spent for a "build-up," and eventually they are thrust on the American public as artists. That most of them flop at the box office is a lesson these powers-that-be never seem to learn. Besides Dietrich I recall two, Simone Simon and Anna Sten, on whom millions were spent, who were dismal failures when they faced the test of the box office. There are others, for the list is long. Our own talent went begging, and finally desperation gave birth to the theater project.

Let the film industry undergo an Americanization process. Divert the cash formerly used for "build-ups" into worthwhile usage. It could be used to found dramatic schools where talent—good American talent—could be fostered and developed into careers. For we have talent here in this country if the film magnates were one-half so interested in finding it as they are that of the foreign-born. There is no reason why thousands of youngsters should not at least have the chance to prove what they can do. The Federal theater was devised by a beneficent Government to take care of out-of-work actors, and now that it has turned its toes to the daisies let Hollywood step forward and lend a hand. I number no actors among my acquaintances, so in writing the above I have no ax to grind. DAILY BREAD.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Civilizations are remembered by the culture they leave behind them. When we think of ancient Greece, we think first of their noble sculpture and their great plays. When we think of medieval Italy, the first things that come to mind are the wonderful paintings, and the eternal poetry.

We, too, will be remembered by the cultural heritage we leave to future generations. By that they will know what we were, how we lived, and those things we held dear, for our art is the reflection of our life.

In the last few years America's culture has been recorded, nurtured, and greatly enhanced both in quality and in quantity by the work of the Works Progress Administration. Any attempt to hinder the arts project is a direct blow to the civilization of our country and a reflection on our intellectual and cultural level. A country that would let its artists starve is a country that would let its life-blood flow into the grave.

At present there is pending before Congress a bill that would do just that, the Woodrum bill. I hope that you and the people of the United States will take a determined stand against it, and insist that Congress defeat this bill.

BEVERLY GOODMAN.

Coughlin And The Church

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of late increasing attention has been drawn to the rapid and substantial growth of the Fascist forces in this country. Experienced observers of political trends are nowadays less inclined to treat this sinister movement as merely the ephemeral manifestation of a lunatic fringe.

The initial agitation of the various Nazi groups is said to have developed an organizational strength of some 800 units, functioning with increasing momentum throughout the land. Following the classic pattern which characterized the ascent of European fascism, these native spearheads of social reaction will, doubtless, soon merge into a single compact mass, captained by an American Fuehrer. Once this merger is consummated, the stage here will be set for the unfolding of that agonizing drama associated with the bloody regimes of Hitler and Mussolini.

Among those who speak with authority on these matters are many who agree that the slickest and strongest of the strategists seeking to effect Fascist penetration in the United States is Father Coughlin. This is borne out by his current radio resurgence as well as by the spreading and successful aggressiveness of his following. Press reports of public brawls in which salesmen for Social Justice, publication of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, are mentioned are now fairly common. The New York Times of the 12th instant, front page, describes such an incident at the Norman Thomas civil liberties rally in Jersey City.

It is strange that, for all its commanding influence and exacting discipline, the Catholic Church is unable to temper the voice, or expose the appalling forces which the artful shepherd of the Shrine of the Little Flower would loose upon this continent. We decline to be lulled by the explanation that the discipline of the Papacy is confined to the spiritual ministrations and not to the secular activities of its priests. We would believe that the church is consecrated to the propagation of the good, the true, and the beautiful. We would believe that its far-flung bishoprics are pledged to champion the gentle charities of its martyred saints. Why, then, does it tolerate the ghastly portent of Father Coughlin and his Nazi propaganda? JULIUS DAVIDSON.

Health Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of all the lobbies at the Capitol, the most inhuman and mercenary is the one to try to defeat the Wagner health bill.

Miss Josephine Roche reported to President Roosevelt that thousands die and thousands and thousands suffer for lack of medical attention.

We pay for doctoring sick cattle, hogs and sheep of cattle owners, why not save the lives of thousands of little children and aid those suffering from disease who are too poor to pay in the richest nation on earth?

The Post Impressionist

Social Security

THE OLD MAN sat in the unadorned room of the County Welfare Board. Coming into the cool, almost damp, atmosphere of the old courthouse had been a sudden change from the heat which shimmered on the pavement outside and had beat on his back in the 9-mile walk up the macadam road to the county seat. For 75 years he had known that road. He had traveled it hundreds of times, in wagon, buggy and on foot. The fields lining it were as familiar in contour as the winding road itself. The surface of the earth does not change a great deal, he thought, nor does the heart within us, which is ever hopeful. He might have added he had been consciously aware that all the way along he had believed implicitly that at last he would have something with which to help Annie.

"What is your daughter's name?" the girl behind the desk was asking crisply.

"Annie Woodward."

"Is she married?"

"Why, Lem Woodward's been dead ten years."

"Has she any children?"

"Reckon she has—eight of 'em; but now she's all wore out raisin' 'em. They've up and left her—all 'sept Frankie, and he's crippled."

"What was your wife's name?"

"Barbara Richards."

"How old were you when you were married?"

"Don't remember exactly."

"But you said you were now 82——"

"I remember my wife was 26 when we married."

"How long were you married?"

"Fourteen months and three days."

"And your daughter is how old."

The old man tried to keep the impatience out of his voice. "Annie must be 40—maybe 50."

"Have you a record of your marriage?"

"Certainly; we were properly married. The record's in St. Barnabas Church."

"Well, then, it ought to be here in the courthouse. Just answer the rest of these questions, Mr. King, and then I'll go down and look. You say you live on William West's farm. How much do you make?"

"Don't make nothing at all now. I just do what I can for my lodging."

"Well, when you did work, what is the most you've made?"

"Dunno. 'Bout $20 a month."

"Have you any savings?"

"No, ma'am."

"Have you any insurance?"

"No, ma'am."

"Have you any personal property?"

The girl looked critically at the faded blue denim overalls, the frayed shirt and the battered hat the man kept turning in his gnarled fingers.

"Excuse me a few minutes, Mr. King. I'll go downstairs and verify your marriage."

She was gone 15 minutes. The old man stirred a little and his rough-hewn walking stick rattled to the floor. He did not stoop to recover it. He shut his eyes and heard in the quiet room the buzzing of a summer fly. He thought of the foolish questions he had been asked and how annoying the girl's voice sounded in its efficient insistence. Then he thought of Barbara, dead these 50 years, and somehow the softness of her voice as she used to call his name re-echoed in his memory. "Glad she can't see me now," he thought, sadly, "askin' for charity."

There was a rapid step. "I didn't find any Edward King except one who married Effie Smathers in 1900."

"That's my second wife."

"Why didn't you tell me that before?" The questioner's voice was angry.

"That marriage didn't mean anything." Contempt was in his voice.

"How long did it last?"

"'Bout two years, I reckon. She wanted to go out nights."

"When did you see her last?"

"Never seen her since, and hope I never will."

"Well, this is a little difficult. However, we'll finish this up, and you sign it. You haven't any savings, insurance or personal property.?"

"Only what you see before you," the old man repeated, wearily.

"Well, this Mr. West, you've worked for him some time?"

"Eight years."

"And he's always paid you?"

"Well, not these last couple of years."

"Then he owes you wages for that time?"

"I reckon he does, but I'll never get 'em."

"Three years at $20 a month is $720 that Mr. West owes you."

The old man looked confused.

"Well, ma'am, I never said that in round figures, and no matter what 'twere, there wouldn't be no way I could collect it. That's why I need this pension so bad; I could go live with Annie and help her."

"Well, your daughter is not dependent upon you; she has children, so you can't claim assistance on that. And if Mr. West owes you over $300 I doubt if we can do anything for you. I'll look into it, but don't be too hopeful, Mr. King. Sign here, will you?"

"Sorry, ma'am, but I can't see nothing at all. Almost blind."

"Well, just put a cross mark here. That'll do. Good day, Mr. King. Don't be too hopeful."

Fair Enough

International Incident

IT IS TOO EARLY to attempt to estimate how much paint was scraped off the newly decorated friendship between the British Empire and the United States in the unfortunate collision, or hub-scrape, between a British and an American runner at Princeton University Saturday afternoon, but, even though no structural damage was done, it is plain that some of the recent sufferings of their Britannic Majesties were endured in vain.

A certain number of hot dogs were eaten for naught, certain pains in the royal feet from standing around the garden party were suffered needlessly, because a British miler named Sidney Wooderson was nudged, accidentally or otherwise, on the last curve of a contest which had been arranged as good clean fun between representatives of the two nations which take great pride in their sportsmanship and more in their ability to accept defeat with grace and good manners.

Tour's Good Feeling Offset By Race

MR. WOODERSON'S personal British press had seemed to take it for granted that he could not lose legitimately and that if he were beaten, then it would follow that he had been fouled. Intimations to this effect had been published in British newspapers before the race, and when Wooderson faltered and ran last in a field of five the British press reported the calamity as another dirty Yankee trick.

These reports immediately washed out much of the expenditures of money on the American tour of Their Majesties and an immeasurable sacrifice of time and attention to detail and protocol by the King and Queen and the Roosevelt family.

If an American war vessel had brushed a British man-of-war the result would have been less grievous, for the officers' code is such that signals of "oop, sorry!" and "don't give it a thought, old chap!" would have been exchanged at once and followed by a binge somewhere ashore or on the Britisher, where there would be a wet mess. But international sports, even afloat between yachts, is always undertaken at the risk of the sudden undoing of more or less elegant diplomatic banquet work and oratory fraught with quotations from Admiral William S. Sims.

Anglo-American Relations Set Back

THE LAST RACE for the America's Cup will be remembered by anyone who is so ill-natured as to bring up the subject at all as an incident which set Anglo-American relations back almost to 1912, and the shocking injustice suffered by fainting Phil Scott, the London fireman, in his contest with Jack Sharkey in Florida is mentioned only with great reluctance, because it instinctively provokes mention of the attempt to foul the American Johnny Hayes out of his victory in the marathon race in the London Olympics, back before the war. In that case the British lifted over the finish line the exhausted and half-conscious Dorando of Italy, and the glib manner in which the details of such episodes are remembered goes to show that they made a deeper impression on both sides than toasts, receptions and picnics.

The reproach to British and Americans is greater than to the Italians and Germans of the present day, at least, because Italy and Germany make no pretense of sportsmanship but regard their internationalists as state gladiators and stake that which they have the drollery to call their national honor on victory. Italy once threatened to block a loan to Austria because an Austrian soccer team beat the Italians, and one read last week that the Germans had warned the Czechs of Prague that if they played rough against the Germans again they would be held answerable for violence against the executors of Der Fuehrer's invincible will.

Their Majesties May Have To Return

THERE HAVE BEEN many such incidents, but the British and Americans like to think that they are above such conduct—as, indeed, they are in a way, because their governments never take part in the squabbles of little boys, of any age, arising in the course of their play at games.

The French, too, are above taking official notice, even though the crowds take part, as happened once when an Aemrican rugby team licked the French in the Paris Olympics and the spectators joined in the rioting with cries of "down with la dette!"

This rudeness was compensated a few years later when their Eugene Criqui was booed by the Americans for persistently getting off the floor every time Johnny Dundee knocked him down. The Frenchman simply had no manners. He got up 11 times in all, and the feelings of Americans who were betting against him must be taken into consideration.

Mr. Wooderson indicates that he will run no more in this country. That is a good idea, because two or three more defeats might compel Their Majesties to head back and go through the whole ordeal again to patch up the damage.

Mounties See Lead To Smith's Plane

Bathurst, N. B., June 20 (U.P.).—Royal Canadian mounted police said today that there was a "strong possibility" that an airplane, believed to be that of Thomas H. Smith, Los Angeles flier who vanished May 28 after taking off on a projected transatlantic flight, may have crashed in northwestern New Brunswick.

R. C. M. P. constables, who questioned residents of the area during the day, said more than 30 people claimed they heard a plane fly low over dense woods near Alcida and explode about about the time Smith was believed to be flying through rain and thick fog over New Brunswick.

Roosevelt Backs Bloom Neutrality

Optimistic on Senate Passage; May Delay West Coast Trip

President Roosevelt yesterday openly indorsed the Bloom neutrality bill, called for its passage at this session, and said the legislative program was moving along so well he probably would delay his West Coast trip until after adjournment.

His apparent optimism over prospects for Senate enactment of the neutrality measure, which would repeal the mandatory arms embargo clauses of the present act, was not in harmony with indications on Capitol Hill, where numerous Senators have declared for a finish fight against the bill, irrespective of how long the session thereby is continued.

However, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, under Chairman Pittman, of Nevada, is scheduled to begin today its consideration of the various neutrality proposals before it.

Bloom to Seek Rule

On the House side, Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, acting chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, will go before the Rules Committee tomorrow seeking a rule to bring his bill onto the floor with six hours of general debate next Monday, or Tuesday at the latest.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference that if Congress goes home without enacting new neutrality legislation, and if a war broke out in the meantime, it would be difficult to pass any sort of a measure without leaving the United States open to charges that it was favoring one side or another.

Therefore, he continued, it would be to Congress' own advantage to insure itself against getting into such a dilemma.

His remarks bore out reports on Monday that he is determined to have the neutrality act revised in the near future despite a threatened Senate filibuster against provisions of the Bloom bill, which would repeal the present arms embargo and place sales of all American supplies to belligerents on a cash-and-carry basis.

The reference to the Bloom bill constituted the President's first open indorsement of the measure, although his approval was taken for granted.

Silent on Special Session

The President declined to discuss reports that he might call a special session to deal with the neutrality issue if Congress adjourns by mid-July without acting. He described the query as an "if" question.

In another step linked with the Nation's foreign affairs, the President yesterday asked Congress to vote $200,000 for an investigation and survey by Army engineers for a canal across Nicaragua.

The request, in the form of a letter to Speaker Bankhead, concurred in a statement by Budget Director Harold Smith that "such a project would facilitate communication between Nicaragua and the United States and have an important bearing upon the defense of the Western Hemisphere."

The project is in line with the agreement Mr. Roosevelt reached with President Somoza of the Central American republic during the latter's recent visit here.

U. S. Protests Amoy Blockade

ican public opinion in favor of support for the British in the Tientsin controversy was reported to prevail in Tokyo officialdom.

At Tientsin, it has been pointed out, the Japanese have been careful to distinguish between the 400 Americans residing in the British concession and the British themselves, emphasizing their stand that their dispute is with Great Britain, not with the United States.

Secretary Hull, in his statement of Monday, declared this Government is not concerned in the original dispute over Japanese demands that Britain surrender four Chinese refugess in the concession who were accused of killing a Japanese. But he made clear that the United States is concerned with "broader aspects" of later developments which brought the blockade and restrictive measures, as well as with utterances and actions of Japanese officials in other parts of China.

U. S. May Act Anyway

The crisis at Kulangsu Island, Amoy, arose on May 12 when a Japanese naval party landed and demanded control over the municipal council. Five days later British, American and French patrols of 42 men each were landed. The Japanese demands have not been met and a Japanese blockade has been established.

Bombings of American properties, principally missions, in various parts of China have continued for many months, despite Tokyo assurances that greater care would be used.

Recent protesting correspondence which the United States wishes to make public includes a note delivered to Japan in May, a Tokyo reply and the new note delivered to Japan Monday. The United States may publish its own notes despite failure of the Tokyo government to assent to publication of its reply.

MacDonald Urges Britain to Respect Arab Movement

Geneva, June 20 (AP).—Malcolm MacDonald, British colonial secretary, declared today the Arab revolt in Palestine was a "genuine patriatic movement" which Britain must respect if she carries out her obligations as the administrative power under her League of Nations mandate.

Here to explain Britain's new Palestine policy to the League of Nations mandate commission, MacDonald broadcast his statement to the United States.

"If this were simply the disreputable protest of terrorists and bandits," he said, "it could continue to go unheeded except by our soldiers and police."

MacDonald denied Britain's new policy would bring about Arab domination of Jews. Although Jews make up less than a third of the population, he said, their "strength is out of all proportion to their numbers" and their economic power "decisive."

Senate Unit Kills D. C. Income Tax

In the event that Senate and House conferees are unable to agree on any tax bill, the Commissioners would be forced to hike the real estate tax above even $1.75 to make up for the loss of the business privilege levy, which expires unless renewed on June 30.

The District Committee voting was preceded by an executive conference with the Citizens Advisory Committee on Taxation at which the civic group explained its indorsement (1) of the complete Pond program and (2), as an alternative, renewal of present taxes for another year while further study of revenue potentialities could be made.

The municipal finance committee of the Board of Trade convened too late to participate in the Senate hearing but agreed yesterday afternoon to indorse the stand of the Citizens Advisory Committee in support of the original Pond report.

The public hearing opened with fireworks when Corporation Counsel Seal challenged authority of Arthur Bernstein, of the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation, to speak for the organizations which he said are affiliated with the committee.

King Demands Answers

Bernstein at first refused to answer several of Seal's questions and did so only under sharp insistence of Chairman King and Senator Austin.

Seal questioned Bernstein as to how Mrs. John Boyle, jr., was chosen chairman of the committee and brought out that she is also head of the Consumers Council, which Seal asserted has only eight members.

Bernstein retorted that Seal was attempting to inject the milk controversy into the tax discussion.

At one stage Chairman King instructed Bernstein to produce the minutes of the committee after he stated he could not recall who was present when Mrs. Boyle was elected chairman two years ago.

After Bernstein had protested that the questions were "silly" and an attempt to discredit the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation, he left the stand with the comment:

"I think this shows that what we need here is a vote for the District of Columbia."

Indorses Income Levy

Previously he had indorsed the income tax proposal of the House but suggested that the Federal bases of $2,500 and $1,000 be substituted.

Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, denied that "everybody is opposed to the business privilege tax" and added that it has one good feature, viz., that many persons have paid taxes who previously escaped.

He quoted figures on building in suburban Washington to substantiate a statement that high taxes are driving residents to adjacent Maryland and Virginia and that within a decade the District will be in a serious financial situation unless the Federal payments are increased.

All of the witnesses for citizens' associations who testified spoke in favor of the principle of the income tax and against a sales tax, but they did not discuss the provisions of the House bill.

William J. Tucker, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, cited a resolution adopted by the federation in April favoring an income tax and opposing both a business privilege tax and a sales levy.

"The House bill is most in line with the federation's views," he said.

Overton Plan Approved

Gerald Walsh, of the Graphic Arts Association, told the committee he believed it would be better to continue present taxes than to adopt any "hastily compiled" revenue legislation.

Sparrel A. Wood, of the Civic Forum of Columbia Heights, indorsed the Overton formula and the income tax and opposed the gross receipts and sales tax proposals.

Henry W. Lynn, who introduced himself as "a private investigator," told the committee it should reenact the 60-40 law and compel the Federal Government to pay the District all the millions of dollars it lost while the act was inoperative.

"Are you serious or jesting?" inquired Senator Bridges.

Washington L. Cleveland, of the District Motor Club, spoke against the parking lot tax carried in the House bill, asserting it would be passed along to motorists.

A. Lane Cricher, representing warehouse interests, asked that the business privilege tax be amended to exempt transient goods stored in Washington.

Herbert S. Wood, Treasury expert on income tax, who spoke for the Citizens' Committee on Fair Taxation, occupied the stand at some length with his opinions on the application of a District income tax to nonresidents and Federal employes who maintain a voting residence in the States.

He said he considered it "entirely proper" that members of Congress be exempt from a District income tax. The members, he said, are in Washington as representatives of the States on a basis comparable to foreign diplomats.

There is no reason, however, for exempting anyone else who maintains a voting residence elsewhere, he said.

"What about the President?" asked Senator Overton.

"Personally I hadn't thought of exempting him," Wood replied.

Wood declared that the predicted losses from taxes paid by District wage earners to their home States "is largely fanfare." He said he believed the District should allow no credits for income-tax payments to the States.

Harry E. Gladman, who said he represented only himself, said he believed it better to "pass a bad law than no law at all," but did not explain which law he referred to.

Evan H. Tucker, of the Northeast Citizens Association, said he favored an increase in the lump sum payment by the Federal Government and was opposed to sales tax.

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, who offered the income tax amendment lowering the base to $2,000 in the House, testified at length in favor of the House bill with modifications.

At the same time he stated he would favor exempting any District residents who pay income taxes to the States, including members of Congress. Instead of the $2,000 base, he said he would be inclined to accept the Federal primary exemptions of $2,500 and $1,000.

Misplaced Compassion

By Ernest K. Lindley

'Poor Joe' O'Mahoney

ALL OF A SUDDEN certain anti-New Dealers have begun to well with compassion for Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, chairman of the TNEC—the Temporary National Economic Committee.

"Poor Joe," the story goes. "He means well, but he isn't smart enough to match wits with Ben Cohen, Tom Corcoran, Leon Henderson and Jerome Frank. He's just a stooge for the New Deal revolutionists.

Hugh Johnson reports that the New Deal "collectivists" have "taken such intense, earnest and innocent bucolics as Senator O'Mahoney as completely as Grant took Richmond."

Senator O'Mahoney has been presiding over the TNEC for almost a year. His election as chairman was applauded in anti-New Deal circles because he had been one of the leaders of the opposition to the President's Supreme Court bill. He was applauded again when public hearings were postponed until after the 1938 election, and when he announced that the TNEC would be a fact-finding study of the American business and financial system, not a "witch-hunt"—although on both points he had the full agreement of most of the Administration members of the committee.

Maybe It's Effect Of Summer Heat

WHY ARE the anti-New Dealers suddenly overcome with pity for "Poor Joe?" It may be only the effects of the first heat of summer. Quite a few New Dealers have a different guess. That the TNEC probes have struck live nerves, especially in the life insurance business. Recently they have brought to light evidence of price-fixing in the insurance business, and of excessive costs to high-pressure selling.

The implication is that these facts—and there are more to come—wouldn't have been brought out if Senator O'Mahoney hadn't been doped and duped by the New Dealers.

Joe O'Mahoney's self-confidence is impervious to taunts. He is a smooth New England-bred Irish politician, an ex-newspaperman, and a lawyer. For a quarter of a century he has called Wyoming his home, and he affects a broad-brimmed Stetson, but his real experience with bucolic life came from hoeing potato and beet patches when he was a youngster. He is about as innocent and gullible as Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, or Senator Pat Harrison.

EVEN FURNIER than Hugh Johnson's description of Joe O'Mahoney as a "bucolic" is his labeling of Leon Henderson as a "collectivist." Henderson is the opposite—a "trust buster." So is Tom Corcoran, and so is Ben Cohen. Hugh Johnson thinks Jerome Frank, chairman of the SEC, is a "stooge" for Ben Cohen. Frank is on amicable terms with Cohen and Corcoran, but he was not their real preference for chairman of the SEC, and at many points his economic views are miles away from theirs—and from Leon Henderson's.

Hugh Johnson implies that Adolf Berle is another pawn of the Corcoran-Cohen combination. The fact is that they are hardly on speaking terms. Moreover, Berle, Corcoran and Cohen have no real influence over the conduct of the TNEC hearings. Berle contributed a memorandum almost a year ago, and recently appeared as a witness to propose a capital credit banking system. Both performances were brilliant, but his views were discordant with those of several important New Dealers on the committee, and the fact that they received extraordinary publicity was painful to some of the TNEC members. Corcoran and Cohen helped to launch the "anti-monopoly" campaign a year and a half ago; but when the TNEC was created the campaign passed out of their hands and became something quite different—a dispassionate study of our economic system.

Johnson Suffering Excess Of Penitence

THE TRUTH IS that there is no harmonious economic program within the Roosevelt Administration—not even in the New Deal wing. With the help of the TNEC hearings a co-ordinated program may eventually be evolved.

Amusingly enough, Senator O'Mahoney seems to be clearer in his mind than are most of the New Dealers about what ought to be done. For example, he has made it plain that he favors Federal regulation of the life insurance companies—although he hasn't made it plain for what purposes the Federal regulations should be used.

Senator O'Mahoney has been clamoring for three years for Federal licensing of all businesses doing an interstate business. Few New Dealers have dared to go so far, and some of them are opposed to the whole idea. In fact, nobody in the Roosevelt Administration advocates going as far toward regimenting the American economy as Hugh Johnson tried to go as NRA administrator. Maybe when he calls the world flounderings of the present-day New Dealers "as revolutionary as Hitler" he is only suffering from an excess of penitence.

British, French To Unite Forces

Singapore, Wednesday, June 21 (U.P.).—Fifty high British and French defense leaders gathered here today to map a plan of strategy for combating Japanese threats to Anglo-French interests in the Far East.

French experts anticipated a rapid agreement to co-ordinate 11 British and French air, sea and land forces in the Far East under the single command of a British officer with Great Britain's $45,000,000 Singapore base as the center of operations.

Problem Of Language

By Vicente Albano Pacis

Replacing English In The Philippines

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

IF EVER there will be a reconsideration of Philippine independence such as U. S. High Commissioner McNutt proposes, a substantial portion of the Filipino votes against it will be due to a desire to assure the extension and permanence of English in the islands. In high places there seems to be a determined effort to torpedo the language, but many thoughtful Filipinos look upon the effort as shortsighted and ultra-nationalistic.

The new secretary of public instruction, Dr. Jorge Bocobo, has just ordered the use of the local dialects as auxiliary media of instruction in the schools, thus radically modifying the practice of 40 years of using English exclusively. Although his order seems to dovetail with the administration's policy of diminishing the importance of English, it appears to contravene the purpose of developing a so-called Philippine national language.

"It is true," Secretary Bocobo subsequently explained his order, "that one of my paramount reforms is the conversion of the primary grades from an English language to a citizenship school . . . The primary school should concentrate upon the teaching of citizenship rather than upon the acquisition of English . . . The present policy is a waste of time and money. However, I must make it clear that under my reform English will continue to be taught in the primary school, although the emphasis will be shifted from English to citizenship."

Bocobo, by the way, gained national prominence, first, by dramatically breaking the American prohibition against agitation for Philippine independence comparatively early during the American regime. Subsequently, he bolstered up his claim to nationalistic leadership by declaring publicly that no Filipino woman should ever accept a proposal of marriage that is not uttered in her native dialect. He explained his idea by saying that it would be a profanity of the Filipino home for Filipinos to make love in any language other than their native dialects.

THERE ARE in the Philippines six principal dialects and a score of minor ones. Obviously, if the country is to be unified, either for the purpose of colonial administration, as Spain desired, or of welding it into a homogenous nation, as America seeks to do, it should have a common language. The Spaniards knew no system of mass education; hence, they were able to implant their language only in the upper strata of Filipino life.

When America came, in 1898, Spanish was no more widespread than any one of the six principal dialects. Since none of the dialects was and is spoken by more than 23 per cent of the population, Spanish was foreign, both to the Americans and to about 90 per cent of the Filipinos. Even the most highly developed Filipino dialect was and is at best only a spoken language entirely colloquial in score and without extensive literature of high order. It was entirely justifiable that English, given its wealth of culture and literature and its international utility, should have been implanted in the Philippines.

Through the American method of mass education which was implanted here, it is now estimated that there are over 2,500,000 Filipinos who have at least a primary school education in English, a figure much higher than any literate group in any single dialect. And to insure the continuance of this language-giving task—which is easily one of the most important accomplishments of America in the Philippines, since through English the Filipinos have been trained in business, technology and democracy—the independence act passed by Congress in 1934 provided that the language of instruction in the Philippine schools shall continue to be primarily in English.

WHEN THE Philippine constitution was being drafted, however, a false sense of nationalism broke loose. Among other things, a provision for the development of a national language, based on one of the dialects, became part of the constitution. The records show that this provision was approved after a previous clause making Tagalog the national language had been rejected overwhelmingly.

Furthermore, the provision was railroaded. It was altered in substance by a committee empowered only to polish its language, then voted upon by the constituent assembly en masse, together with several other articles of the constitution, without anyone calling attention to the alteration. Now, all indications point to the possibility that the so-called national language, which a language institute is now supposedly conceiving, if not nursing, will be no other than Tagalog, which the constitution makers had rejected, and in spite of the fact the constitutional mandate is to integrate the dialects together.

If the resulting national language will be truly an integration of all the dialects, it will be virtually foreign to the 16,000,000 Filipinos, who will have to start from scratch all over again to acquire a common if comparatively primitive language; if it is Tagalog it will be a phoney national language.

ALTHOUGH neither the dialects nor English has been able to displace Spanish in the Philippines completely, there has been no national language movement before. The appeal to what is native and the attack against what is foreign, even if only by implication, is invariably pernicious.

This is true with the national language movement and true with the use of dialects as auxiliary means of instruction. Their auxiliary use may be easily forgotten and they may become the principal instruction media. Given the fact that the only effective public press in the Philippines is in English and Spanish, citizen literacy in the dialects may be virtually useless. English and the fact that Filipino officials and teachers freely move from one province to another regardless of their native dialects, have been the greatest nationalizing factors in the Philippines. Both may soon cease to be—and not even a fake substitute for them appears in the offing.

Senate Committee Reports Tax Bill

Morgenthau and Undersecretary Hanes this year pressed the issue of removal of business tax "deterrents," Mr. Roosevelt stipulated only that no tax avoidance loopholes be opened by the new measure and that revenue yields at least equal present levels. He did not tell reporters whether he considered these conditions fulfilled, but is expected to comment when the bill is signed.

Continued in the new bill are $544,300,000 in nuisance taxes and the $100,000,000 renewal of the 3-cent non-local postage rate which expire June 30. The President expressed hope that the measure would reach his desk by that date.

Several Amendments

As his committee broke all records in approving the measure, Harrison yesterday echoed Doughton's view that business should be encouraged by removal of tax deterrents, Senate Majority Leader Barkley said he had hoped the tax bill could be called up tomorrow for final Senate disposal, but feared it would be forced over until Friday.

Amendments added before the Senate committee unanimously reported the measure:

Extend for one year present law provisions that gains to stockholders resulting from SEC orders for liquidation of holding companies shall not be taxable.

Grant island possessions the 80 per cent Federal credit on estate taxes now allowed to the States.

Provide that transactions between concern and its subsidiary selling agency shall presume to be a sale unless the manufacturing firm owns more than 25 per cent of the subsidiary's stock.

Provide that Commodity Credit Corporation loans to farmers on farm products be regarded as a sale in the year the loans are made, for Treasury tax purposes.

Backing For The Horseless Carriage

("Henry Ford started the Ford Motor Co. 26 years ago with $2,800."—News item.)

Then

A man demonstrates a horseless carriage and asks financial backing. He says his name is Henry Ford.

Nobody knows him.

He says he needs about $2,800.

He gets it.

The business starts.

Today

A man demonstrated a horseless carriage and asks financial backing. He says his name is Ford.

Nobody even asks his first name after he mentions $2,800.

He goes to some wealthy men but they tell him this is no time to take chances.

He goes to a banker. The banker says a horseless carriage might go all right, but the bank is putting all its money into Government bonds.

He goes to a close friend, who expresses the belief a horseless carriage might have a future, but that on account of the economic setup, the unbalanced budget, the inflation scare, etc., it is no time to launch a new project.

He goes to another close friend, who is quite delighted with the horseless buggy, but who "isn't putting any money into anything now on account of the European situation."

He goes to a politician. The politician says a horseless carriage looks okay on paper and might be profitable through replacing the horse and buggy; but that to replace the horse and buggy would be to throw blacksmiths, hack drivers, feed store workers, harnessmakers, etc., out of work.

He finally locates a couple of capitalists who have imagination enough to see a future for the automobile, but he drives them out by predicting that "they will make millions." The thought of what they will pay in taxes scares them so much they order Mr. Ford to forget all about it.

He decides to try Wall street.

The SEC demands a demonstration. The car works perfectly, but the commission cautions Mr. Ford against undue optimism, overstatement or the use of superlatives. It holds up everything while it makes a six-month inquiry to see if his right name is Henry Ford.

A broker agrees to float stock.

The flotation is rendered a little difficult by SEC rules that lines in the advertisements such as "may ultimately become as popular as the horse and surrey" and "likely some day to take its place as a pleasure vehicle" be deleted in the interests of honesty.

Ford quits Wall street, finally gets $2,800 from a group of friends—Heaven knows how—and starts a small shop.

Labor delagates warn him that for every man he hires to make an auto he must hire at least one livery stable worker.

There are a series of strikes. They are referred to the NLRB. The NLRB investigates for a year and a half and files a report charging that a horseless carriage industry is unfair to whip makers.

Mr. Ford appeals to Washington and explains, rather pathetically, "All I am trying to do is to make some horseless carriages."

There are frenzied speeches in the Senate and House in denunciation of the new invention by orators who speak as "a friend of that noble animal, the horse."

The President names a Commission "To Inquire Into the Aspects of the Horseless Carriage With a View to Possible Effects on the Economic and Social System."

The committee announces it will have a report ready in three years.

Mary Haworth's Mail

All Parents Are Not to Be Trusted, Says Girl Who Was Spurned by Mother in Time of Trouble

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your advice of May 19, to "Pat P.," to confide her trouble to her mother, might be excellent advice for some girls, but if her mother is like my mother, she will regret it all her life. At a pitifully early age, I had the same problem. The boy was scared to death and as neither of us had finished high school, we thought it impossible to marry. So I went to my mother. She refused to help in any way and told me I would have to leave home at once, never to return. I was nearly crazy and did not know what to do or where to go. God was good to me and took care of the situation before my mother turned me out of the house . . . I was ill for several weeks and my mother never came near me. She would send my meals to my room by a maid . . .

I am now 32 and have my second husband. My first husband was killed in a traffic accident after we had been happily married for 10 years. I was then forced to return to my mother's home as my health was not good and I was unable to find employment. Hell could not have been worse. Mother would get angry with me and remind me that I didn't know how to behave before marriage. She would stop speaking to me for weeks at a time. She also dismissed her maid and I had to do all the housework and cooking . . .

I have recently married my second husband and mother lowered herself to tell him the whole story of my past. Fortunately, I had found the courage to confide in him before marriage, as I would have lived in fear of her telling him at the first opportunity. My husband is a fine young man, only 25 years of age, and he is furious with my mother and cannot imagine anyone having a mother like her. I might mention that my mother claims to be very religious, and is a great church worker and church-goer. Do you think she is a real Christian? And what attitude do you think I should take toward such a mother?

ANN P.

Christian Characteristic

DEAR ANN P.: According to Webster's dictionary, the chief characteristic (supposedly) of the Christian personality is kindliness. And kindliness, in the full meaning of the word, is best interpreted, I think, in those Scriptural passages wherein the superlative spiritual value of charity is extolled as follows: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal . . . And though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing . . .

"Charity suffereth long, and is kind . . . doth not behave itself unseemly . . . is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; . . . beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth . . . And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

If charity (in the sense of kindliness) is the touchstone of Christian character, I think we may conclude—on the basis of your mother's performance when confronted with the knowledge of your bitter extremity (not to mention her subsequent behavior)—that she rates about zero in this regard, despite the fact that she is "a great church worker and church-goer." For the Scriptual message reads: "Though I have all faith . . . and have not charity, I am nothing."

Evaluating your mother's curious conduct from another angle, one inclines to think that she is probably neurotically love-starved; that her essential nature is probably as ardent as your own; and that her sanctimonious condemnation of human weakness is but an inverted expression of great latent personal susceptibility to erotic temptation. The person who is belligerently or vituperatively on the offensive against the frailties of the flesh to which all mankind is heir is, usually, a person who wrestles constantly, in the recesses of his spirit, with the devils of lascivious reverie. In her (apparently vicious) desire to destroy your chances of happiness in marriage, one senses consuming jealousy of you—that you should have groped through heartbreaking mistakes to fulfillment, thus inexplicably throwing her rigid, poverty-stricken philosophy of life into the discard.

The sensible attitude to take toward such a mother is one of detachment—compassionate detachment. We are told that to understand all is to forgive all, and I am sure that each of you would spontaneously forgive the other, if each knew what the other had been required to bear. I daresay your mother is as much the victim of misguided childhood training in Puritanical half-truths as you were the victim, in childhood and adolescence, of her lack of enlightened and charitable understanding, such as might have protected you, on the one hand; and succored you, on the other hand.

'That Man's Here Again'

His voice, calling from my neighbor's window, awakens me at 6:30 o'clock, commanding me to leap from my bed and express the joy of living by touching the floor with my hands 50 times, doing 100 rights and lefts and taking 25 deep breaths in my robe de nuit before an open window.

When I reach my restaurant for breakfast, he is there before me telling me as I try to work up an appetite for my egg and toast just what Mussolini's threats for the day are and how many cities the Japanese have bombed.

As I stop for a shoe shine, he is at my ear warning of the dire fate in store for me if I fail to use Boop's Snail Oil for my dandruff.

I enter a taxicab only to find his voice blaring out at me the news that Hitler is going to make another ominous announcement.

As I walk along the street, he is familiarly shouting at me from drug stores, kodak shops, lunch counters and parked cars.

At the office, he is repeatedly barking forth at me from the boss' desk, the office boy's chair, the women's restroom and the janitor's sanctum.

At noon I dive into a hotel to escape him but there he is in a corner of the lobby, his smooth, unctuous voice telling me how to attain beauty, glamour, happiness and success.

I go to a friend's home for dinner and he greets me as I enter telling me that no man will ever look at me again unless I use Snookem's Allure Hair Tonic.

He shouts at me above the conversation through the evening and when I go upstairs for my wrap there he is speaking softly out of a bedside table.

I enter a taxicab, taking a friend with me for protection, but he is at my shoulder again shouting us both down with his firm cajoling directions.

I enter my own home, find he has beaten me to it. In desperation I throw him out of the window. He tantalizingly calls from my neighbor's house across the way. I stuff my ears with cotton, get into bed, but am awakened by his shouting good night to me at 3 o'clock in the morning.

And, yet my friends persist in asking me if I do not get lonely—living all by myself.

Your Figure, Madame!

Discard Pillow to Avoid Dowager Hump; Elevation of Feet Also Is Helpful In Relaxing and Reversing Circulation

TO SLEEP OR not to sleep without a pillow is the question that, sometimes or other, seems to occur to every woman concerned with keeping her looks.

And it is apparently the one thing beauty writers agree upon—they are all against it, even the ones who slumber gently and with pure consciences on their own pillows!

While it's a regrettable admission to have to make, that's what I do, too! When you ask whether I advise sleeping without a pillow, my reply is I do! But the truth is that I sleep better with one and sleep is nothing to be trifled with!

Take Out Some Feathers

Now, before you begin thinking this is a case of spinach for others, let me explain. I have streamlined my pillow by removing half the feathers and it has so little resistance left that it couldn't possibly cause the double chin and dowager's hump which are supposed to be the twin penalties for sleeping with the head elevated.

But if you have the slightest tendency to these ageing faults, the least you can do is take part of the feathers out. And, if you can bear it, it would be better to give up your pillow entirely.

It may be that you would profit from the pillow trick suggested for the officeworker who bends over a desk most of the day. Use either a baby-size pillow or a folded towel. Lie on the back on the floor with the padding directly under the shoulder blades or a bit higher up if you have a definitely rounded upper back. Lie with the pillow under the rounded part of the back for two 10 minute periods a day.

Sleep With Feet Up

Any woman who stands on her feet all day would do well to sleep with the pollow under her feet rather than under her head! In fact, this position is recommended by one doctor as a possible preventive of varicose veins.

Standing for long hours causes congestion in the legs and ankles and you would benefit from reversing the flow of circulation. Even though you cannot bring yourself to sleep with the feet elevated, you can relax with the feet propped up on several pillows.

There is more than one way to use a pillow! When I interviewed Bette Davis, who carries her head like an empress as a matter of habit, I asked if she used a pillow—and learned that she sleeps with four! She doesn't, however, stack them up one on top of the other. They are arranged fanwise and she actually sleeps on only one at a time.

Elegant Hair Is Next Trend, Stylist Asserts

Accent on Youth Will Fade for Stress On Elegance, He Says

THE TIME is approaching when the all too familiar "Isn't she cute!" and "Isn't she smart-looking!" will be changed to "Isn't she elegant!" People are getting more elegant-conscious every day, says Andre Musee, assistant to Antoine, Parisian hair stylist, and out of this trend, he predicts, will develop a new ideal of feminine personality.

Musee, who is in Washington this week designing coiffures at a local store, believes strongly that elegance should be the goal toward which women should strive in coiffure, dress, manners, personality. He defines elegance as "that refining, individualistic touch" which, when coupled with dignity, results in distinction. The truly elegant woman does not follow the herd nor resort to extremes or extravagances, according to Musee. She has simplicity, originality and good taste.

Elegance After Youth

"At present the American woman is not so interested in elegance as she is in youth," said Musee. "Recently awakened to the fact that perhaps she had gone too far in being a partner of man, she set about trying to make him conscious of her as a woman. Her first step in developing her feminine attractiveness was by trying to look young. Her coiffure, her hats, her dresses, her actions all were designed toward this end. Her next step will be to cultivate elegance, which is already the goal toward which European women strive."

The trend in coiffures, Musee believes, is evidence that the ideal of elegance is taking hold in this country. "Women generally want softer and more individualistic coiffures than formerly," he said. "They are not content to follow the styles blindly, and the day of harsh, set hair arrangements is at an end. Comfort and good taste also have entered into coiffure trends, as witness the short, cool and flattering hair effects that we have this summer."

Style Must Fit Wearer

Musee, however, deplores the tendency he has noted in "very young girls" to copy the coiffures of Hollywood stars regardless of whether these styles were becoming to them individually. The essence of elegance in hair, he points out, is an arrangement becoming to the individual wearer, kept with scrupulous care.

The old system of designing coiffures to suit hats is passing, Musee reports, and he believes that from now on hats will take their cue from the coiffures. In hats, as in hair dress, he would apply the rule of elegance and not have styles followed too blindly. "Why should hats generally be designed to wear tilted on the right side of the head?" he asked. "Many women would look better with them worn tilted to the left. The needs of the individual should be considered."

The general trend of hairdress is forward, says Musee, with emphasis on making the coiffure a softening, flattering frame for the face.

Tomorrow's Home

Apparently the home of the future will be quite a flexible affair. A series of new model houses opened lately provided all sorts of ingenious ways of throwing the whole place in together. By sliding walls of wood and glass. By leather-pleated partitions that move back and forth on concealed tracks. By drapery partitions made to draw back and forth for privacy when desired.

Cucumber Pickles Make Fine Salad With Cabbage

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

CUCUMBER PICKLE is an all-American favorite. The crisp crunchiness of freshly garnered cucumbers makes them do things to every-day dishes. Here are some of the things you can do with cucumber pickle to make plain dishes gay.

March the inviting green slices down the center of baked fish from the oven. Place them on meat loaves in the same way. Outline the shape of a golden brown omelet. Serve them generously with sausages and eggs. Present them with meat pies, noodles and casserole specials, such as baked beans. They make a definite impression when plopped into the consomme. Use in making cabbage, cucumber pickle salad.

Cabbage, Cucumber Pickle Salad

Mix 3 cups shredded cabbage, 1 green pepper shredded, 10 slices cucumber pickles chopped, 1 tablespoon grated onion, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons mayonnaise. Serve in cups of crisp lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise and carrot flowers. To make carrot flowers, slice carrot very thinly crosswise. Cut slices in toward center to four large petals. Place in ice water so petals will curl.

Brazilian Army Chief of Staff To Be Feted at Banquet Tonight

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

AND STILL they come—foreign dignitaries to give a lift to the record course of June-time entertaining. With the Norwegian Crown Prince and Crown Princess scheduled to arrive next week and the Brizilian army chief of staff, Gen. Pedro Aurelio de Goes Monteiro, already in town, the traditional summer lull in partying is still far in the distance.

As is the usual thing when an important foreign dignitary comes visiting, there's a flurry of social events now centering around Gen. Monteiro, who will be feted right and left during his stay. After a two-day visit here, he will be off on an across-the-country trip, but he will return early next month for another brief sojourn that also will be accepted with parties in his honor.

Although his Washington calendar is heavy, if there is any spare time the Brazilian general may make a point of calling on one of his cousins who has made her home in Washington for some time. She is Mme. de Oliveira Lima, widow of the donor of the Lima library at Catholic University. Her late husband, Dr. Manoel de Oliveira Lima, Brazilian diplomat, had an unusual collection of 40,000 volumes presented to the university in 1924.

As yet, however, Mme. de Oliveira Lima has no definite plans for seeing her distinguished kinsman during his Washington visit. "His schedule here is so full, I shall probably not see him," she said yesterday by telephone from her home at 1507 Park road.

SIGHT-SEEING tours and visits to United States officials will take up a good part of Gen. Monteiro's time, but four social engagements—all stag—also will highlight his Capital schedule. When he returns to town next month, however, his wife and daughter will be with him—they arrive in New York by boat on Sunday—and chances are some parties not yet on the date book will add an extra fillip of interest to the July calendar.

Meanwhile, today and tomorrow the usual June quota of weddings, engagements, and prenuptial parties will share the spotlight with parties given for Gen. Monteiro.

THIS AFTERNOON, Capital notables in general and Army officials in particular will be at the Brazilian Embassy at 5 o'clock for the reception to be given by Maj. Jose Bina Machado, Brazilian military and air attache. Gen. Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff, will fete the noted visitor at a banquet tonight at the Mayflower, and tomorrow the President will entertain Gen. Monteiro at luncheon at the White House.

Dinner in his honor at the Brazilian Embassy tomorrow night will wind up the general's current social calendar here, as he will be off by plane the next morning for Langley Field.

AFTER A CIRCLE TRIP that will include an across-the-country itinerary, mostly by plane, Gen. Monteiro will return to Boston on July 6 and the following day he will return to Washington.

A dinner in his honor on July 7, given by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, and a luncheon for him with Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson on July 8 are other social accents for his second sojourn here.

Fords Entertain At Informal Dinner Party

Representative and Mrs. Leland M. Ford, of Santa Monica, Calif., entertained at a delightfully informal dinner last evening in the Colonial Room of the Wardman Park Hotel. The ladies came gowned in cool summer dinner frocks, but the gentlemen were strictly informal in their dress, with white linen suits predominating.

Those in the company were Dr. and Mrs. Sterling Mead, Maj. and Mrs. Leland Miller, Representative and Mrs. Albert Carter, of California, Capt. and Mrs. George A. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Suitors, of California, and B. W. Gearhart, of California.

Fowlers Announce Birth of a Son

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Fowler announce the birth of a son, James McDonald Fowler, on Monday, in Eugene, Oreg., where the parents formerly lived.

Mr. Fowler is assistant chief of the Division of Trade Agreements, Department of State. He and his wife left Washington for Eugene by plane last Friday. They will return by plane with their child the latter part of next month.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Magnin, of 325 Franklin street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances, to Arthur H. Mitchell, of South Orange, N. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Mitchell, of 450 Cecil avenue, Riverdale, Md. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Leaving Soon for Visit in New York

Miss Nancy Strong, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Alden G. Strong, will be off soon for New York to visit Miss Audrey Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown, at Governors Island. She and Miss Brown became friends several years ago when Col. Strong was stationed on Governors Island

Miss Tuckerman Will Wed Today

Mrs. Edgar Mora Davison, of New York, has announced the engagement and approaching marriage of her niece, Miss Nancy Reeves Middleton, daughter of the late Arthur E. H. Middleton, of Washington, to William Saxton Myers, of Putnam, Conn., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick F. Myers, of North Adams, Mass. The wedding will take place July 1 in St. John's Church, Williamstown, Mass.

The prospective bride is a granddaughter of the late Rear Admiral Edward Middleton, U. S. N., and a descendant of Arthur Middleton, signer of the Declaration of Independence. She was graduated from Bennington College in Vermont.

Miss Middleton's sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Hawks, jr., will be her only attendant. George Myers will be best man for his brother, and Frederick Myers, another brother, and Harold Fesenden will be ushers.

Mme. Boncesco Leaves Today for Maine Colony

Mme. Boncesco, wife of the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, will leave today for Maine where she will spend the next two months at Eliot O'Hara's art colony. Mr. Boncesco will join her frequently during vacation time.

Corps of Theatrical Celebrities Fails To Create Excitement on Capitol Hill

MAYBE IT'S the heat, or perhaps Congress is becoming blase about celebrities by this time—anyway, nobody in the crowded House dining room yesterday moved a muscle when Miss Tallulah Bankhead and a whole corps of theatrical celebrities made an entrance. It would be difficult to be more impassive about the situation than the Representatives and their wives, friends and constituents who thronged the place.

Miss Bankhead and Miss Blanch Yurka had just finished testifying for continuation of Federal Theater Projects before a Senate Appropriations sub-committee. Senator Claude Pepper, who is leading the Senate drive to restore the projects, had been busy all morning marshaling the 30 or so artists who came here to help out, and Mrs. Pepper was among the guests at the luncheon given afterward by Speaker Bankhead, father of the famous actress.

TALLULAH looked both beautiful and chic in a navy blue lightweight wool dress, made on full lines, and a big felt vagabond hat to match. She talked animatedly all through lunch, and did away with some stuffed tomatoes, grilled apples, lettuce and fruit salad, coffee and a glass of beer. She seemed very glad to see Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who poked her head in on her way to lunch to greet the Speaker and his daughter.

Miss Yurka, who is tall and blonde, wore a navy blue frock with a white embroidered jacket and a little flower turban. Mrs. Pepper was in blue and white checks and a white straw hat with ribbon streamers. Among the other luncheon guests were John Emery, Donald Ogden Stewart, famous writer, of New York and Hollywood, and Herbert Shumlin, producer of Miss Bankhead's current hit, "The Little Foxes."

Before the luncheon the actresses and the other celebrities obligingly posed for pictures in Speaker Bankhead's office. There was some confusion about plane reservations, but finally six places on the 4:35 to New York were ordered. In her husky voice, Miss Bankhead explained that her fellow-artists wanted to stay in Washington until the last moment.

THOUGH the appointment of Archibald MacLeish as head of the Library of Congres is not yet definite, some librarians having protested because they doubt the ability of the great scholar and poet to file cards, everybody here who knows Mr. and Mrs. MacLeish hopes they will be Capital residents. The poet's wife is as charming as her husband is distinguished, and is a talented singer, having done concert work off and on ever since girlhood. She comes originally from Farmington, Conn., one of the most beautiful towns in America, and the only place in the United States, incidentally, which Henry James thought fit to live in on his return after years of residence in England. Mrs. MacLeish attended Miss Porter's School there, is lovely looking, chic, and has an unusually beautiful speaking voice. She and her husband visit Washington occasionally and spent a week-end here earlier this year with Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson. Mrs. Acheson will return on Friday from a stay in New York.

ODDS AND ENDS: The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes have cards out for a cocktail party on Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 at Headwaters Farm, their place near Olney, Md. Little maps with directions accompany the invitations . . . Mrs. W. R. Munroe is spending a week or ten days in Connecticut while her husband, Capt. Munroe, is in Portsmouth, N. H., helping to investigate the Squalus disaster.

Civic Theater To Give Ross' Morality Play

'God Is Love' Will Be Presented at Faulkner Lawn Party

Many members of Capital society will attend the lawn party to be given tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Waldron Faulkner, 3415 Thirty-sixth street, when Malcolm Ross' morality play, "God Is Love," will be presented by members of the Washington Civic Theater. Mr. Ross, who is director of information for the National Labor Relations Board, is the author of a recently published autobiography, "Death of a Yale Man." His play was written about four years ago.

Among those expected to be present tonight are Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Charles E. Acker, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, Miss Mary Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Charles R. Ellicott, jr., Dr. and Mrs. Lester Neuman, Miss Alice Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Underwood, Miss Anne nderwood, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Partridge III, John Dreier, Mr. and Mrs. A. Z. Foster Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Malcoln Halliday, Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson, Theodore Dominick, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Clark, Mr. and Mrs. R. Stanley Brown, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Pearson.

Miss Betty Leaf, chairman of the committee on arrangements, will be assisted in serving refreshments by Mrs. Thacher Winslow, Miss Barbara Donald, Miss Elinor Lord, Mrs. L. Metcalfe Walling, Miss Bernice Kraus, Miss Nancy Ordway, Mrs. Francis Palms, Miss Virginia Rand, Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mrs. Yvonne Kushner, Miss Betty Beale, Mrs. Doris Cooper, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Bunnie Skinner, Miss Margery Rice, Miss Eileen Fowler, Mrs. Arthur Bernard, and Miss Eleanor Peirce.

In case of rain, the party will be held tomorrow evening instead.

Eliza Goddard Is Married to Donald W. Weeks

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Goddard, of Washington, announce the marriage on Monday of their daughter, Eliza Cunningham, to Donald W. Weeks, son of Mrs. Harry Ellis Weeks, of Cleveland, and the late Mr. Weeks. The ceremony took place in the presence of members of the two families at St. Peter's Church, New Kent County, Va., and was followed by a small reception at Iden, the neighboring home of the bride's uncle, Edward Harrison. The Rev. C. Gresham Marmion, of St. Alban's Church, Washington, officiated at the marriage.

Miss Mary Goddard served as her sister's attendant, and Franklin Bartle was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Weeks is a graduate of Sidwell Friends School and of American University, class of 1939. The bridegroom is an alumnus of Harvard and received his Ph. D. degree from Western Reserve University.

The couple will spend the summer motoring in New England and Mexico and will make their home here after September 15 at 4001 Forty-seventh street.

Give Dance Tomorrow

A dinner dance at the Army and Navy Country Club tomorrow night will close the season's activities for the Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter, D. A. R. This dance, which is given annually, is for members only, and provides a social climax to the year's events. Arrangements for the dance have been made by Miss Mary Dobyns, assisted by her committee.

Home Circle Meets

The Home Lovers Club held a dinner party last evening at the Shoreham Terrace. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tillem, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sangmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Garrison, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Leo B. Plunkert, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Haddaway and Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Berezoski.

Engaged

MISS NAN STEWART,

whose engagement to John A. Birch is announced today by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Harrison Morton Stewart, of Silver Spring, Md. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Albert Birch, of Washington. Miss Stewart attended Trinity College and the University of Maryland. The wedding will take place September 2

Miss Middleton To Wed in July

Miss Lisette Riggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Riggs, entertained at a buffet supper last night at her home on R street in honor of Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman and Capt. Robert Williams, U. S. M. C., whose marriage will take place this afternoon at 4:30 in the Great Choir of the Washington Cathedral. The members of the bridal party were at the supper last evening.

A reception at Tuxeden, Edgemoor, Md., home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, will follow the ceremony.

Mrs. Casey Visits Virginia Beach With the Dudleys

Among recent visitors at the Cavalier Beach Club, Virginia Beach, Va., were Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, wife of Representative Casey, of Massachusetts; her mother, Mrs. Charles Howard Dudley, of Hanover, N. H., and her brothers, Drew Dudley, formerly of Washington, and Robert Whitter Dudley, attorney with the Federal Trade Commission.

On Saturday Mrs. Dudley gave a luncheon for her son, Bernard Francis Dudley, of Springfield, Vt., who was married that evening to Miss Ann Elizabeth Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Butler, of Norfolk, Va. The marriage was an important social event in the Christ and St. Luke's Church, Norfolk. Mrs. Casey and her brothers are descendants of Gov. Thomas Dudley, of Massachusetts.

Miss Grove Wed To R. B. Smith, Jr.

At a quiet ceremony in Ascension Episcopal Church yesterday afternoon Miss Branch Brokenbrough Grove and Richard Buckner Smith, jr., were married, with the Rev. Francis Parsons officiating. There were no attendants.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Locher Grove, of Washington and Fairfax, Va., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Smith, of the Glen, Clarke County. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home after July 1, at the Glen, where they will live until their own home is completed.

Miss O'Flaherty To Be Married To T. R. Palmer

Wedding to Take Place June 30 at Epworth Church

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Loy O'Flaherty, of Richmond, Va., announce the engagement of their sister, Miss Maude Irene O'Flaherty, of Washington, to Thomas Ray Palmer, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Emmett Palmer. Miss O'Flaherty, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Cullers O'Flaherty, has been secretary to the Dean of Columbian College of George Washington University since 1930. Their marriage will take place June 30 at 8 o'clock in the Epworth Methodist Church.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Woodstock High School and George Washington University. She is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority, Pi Lambda Theta Educational Sorority, Gamma Eta Zeta, now affiliated with Pi Delta Epsilon Journalistic Fraternity, and the Joppa Chapter of the Eastern Star.

She was the first secretary-treasurer of the Washington Panhellenic Association; has served as secretary and president of the Washington Alumnae Association of Kappa Delta and for the past two years has been alumnae adviser to the Sigma Mu Chapter of Kappa Delta. She has also been treasurer of the General Alumni Association of George Washington University for the last two years.

Mr. Palmer attended the Waynesboro public schools and the Presbyterian Junior College for Boys in Maxon, N. C. He is an officer in the Fellowcraft Club of Joppa Lodge and is active in Masonic work.

Ruth Hanna Simms Is Visiting New York

Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms, formerly Ruth Hanna McCormick, is visiting New York from her ranch at Albuquerque, N. Mex. She formerly resided in Washington, her home in Georgetown now being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason, jr.

Mrs. Simms gave a luncheon on Monday in the Japanese Garden of the Ritz-Carlton in honor of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Mrs.

Mrs. Studley Myers Is Party Hostess At Bermuda Home

Members of the Washington colony now sojourning at Cambridge Beaches, Somerset, Bermuda, attended the opening supper dance of the season there recently.

Mrs. Studley Myers, of Washington, gave a large cocktail party at her home before the event, and a number of her guests went by speed boat from her attractive Somerset residence to the dance. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Campion Acheson, of Washington.

W. Bragg Picketts On Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. W. Bragg Pickett, who are now on a motor honeymoon throughout Virginia and nearby Southern States, will make their home on East Capitol street in Washington.

The former Miss Katherine Roebuck, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Porter Roebuck, of Clarence, Mo., and Mr. Pickett, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pickett, of Shelbyville, Mo., were married on Sunday at a double-ring ceremony, with the Rev. Clifford H. Jope officiating.

The bride was gowned in blue with accessories of pink and carried pink rosebuds. Mrs. Melvin A. Huntt, matron of honor, wore pink with white accessories. Mr. Huntt was the best man.

Housekeepers Alliance Opposes Schulte Bill

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Housekeepers' Alliance yesterday afternoon took action at its June meeting expressing opposition to the Schulte bill which is now before Congress. The motion in opposition to the bill followed a discussion of the milk investigation by Mrs. John Boyle, of the Consumers' League, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, one of the alliance members who owns a farm in Virginia. The sentiment of the alliance was for maintenance of the high public health standards now in force in the District.

Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, president of the alliance, presided at the meeting, at which Mrs. Tilman B. Parks was hostess at her home, 1502 Decatur street. Mrs. Wiley, in addition to speaking on the milk situation, also gave a report of the San Francisco meeting of the council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which she attended as national chairman of Indian welfare. Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass also talked on the council meeting which she attended as one of the delegates from the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, of which she is second vice president.

Mrs. Parks reported that she had conferred with Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department and expressed to her the alliance's desire to give support to any efforts in the direction of having new quarters for the bureau.

Several annual reports which were held over from the May meeting were read including that of Mrs. Newburgh. She reviewed the club's programs during the year and its action on various civic problems in which it has taken an interest.

Mrs. Wiley reported as civic chairman, Mrs. Frederck Yates as chairman of the visiting committee; Mrs. Olive E. Madden, of community service; Mrs. R. Kings Stone as corresponding secretary. A report from the motion-picture committee of which Mrs. John Bannerman is chairman, was read.; Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, American Home chairman; Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale, education.

Mrs. Henry Martin Phillips was appointed chairman of the hospitality committee, succeeding Mrs. Theodore Holdcamper, who resigned.

Following the business session, Mrs. Parks entertained the club members at tea, with Mrs. Frank Shortall and Mrs. Wintemute W. Sloan as assisting hostesses. The table was appointed with a lace cloth and a center bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium. Mrs. Shortall and Mrs. Parks wore gowns of pink and Mrs. Sloan was in yellow, accenting the artistic color scheme.

Among special guests at the meeting was Mrs. Jay Porter Conger, new president of the Junior Alliance which is sponsored by the senior organization; also Mrs. C. Y. Stephens, delegate to the senior alliance, and Mrs. Albert Lance, recording secretary.

Arts Club Book Party Participants Appear as Characters and Titles

MISS ANN DARLINGTON was in charge of the program last night at the Arts Club, where the members and their guests enjoyed a book party.

Those taking part were dressed as book titles or characters which the audience guessed. There were also charades based on the titles of well-known books.

Taking part in the program were Mrs. Ednah Proctor Hayes, Mrs. Frank Rice, Mrs. Emma Trall Knorr, Mrs. Hazel Nyman, Mrs. Dorothy Winchole, the Misses Salva Johnson, Alice Brevie, Elizabeth Clarke, Mary Cramer, Caroline Martin, Geraldine Larignino, Marie Wolcott, the Misses Shirley and Arlene Walker.

Mrs. Louise Lazell and Miss Helen Staples were hostesses of the evening.

THE WASHINGTON ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION of Alpha Delta Pi, which closed its season with a supper meeting at the home of Mrs. George Riggs, has elected Mrs. Richard Fourchy president. Other new officers are Mrs. George Linkins, vice president; Mrs. Norman Hearn, treasurer; Miss Dorothy Carr, recording secretary; Miss Kathryn Campbell, corresponding secretary; Miss Janice Hale, assistant corresponding secretary; Miss Edith Nelson, reporter; Mrs. Riggs, Panhellenic delegate.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL AUXILIARY to the Veterans of Foreign Wars last night held an entertainment at Mount Alto Hospital under the direction of Edith Hiser. At their meeting tomorrow at 1700 L street, the members will elect delegates to the national convention, to be held in Boston, August 27 to September 1.

New members who have been taken into the auxiliary during the past month are Gertrude Lehman, Gwendolyn E. Mitchler, Violet Palmer, Audrey White, Ruth Voss and Myrtle Rossetta.

Ethel Sendlak has been indorsed as a candidate for first vice president of the department.

MRS. DOUGLAS HARTMAN has been appointed chairman of a special committee to arrange for a picnic of the Wisconsin State Society, to be held in July, the date to be announced later. The society plans at least five social functions next season.

William B. Bennett has been re-elected president of the organization. Other officers re-elected are Miss Olive K. Greve, second vice president; Miss Iva Grace Prisk, treasurer, and Miss Clara L. Opper, secretary.

The newly elected officers include Representative Charles Hawks, first vice president; Mrs. W. M. Collins, G. W. Hopper, and Alexander Curtis, trustees. Trustees whose terms have not expired are Mrs. Hugo Czerwonky, Milton C. Steuber, Representative Joshua Johns, whose wife is president of the 76 Club; Mrs. Harvey Craver, Philip E. Reid and Mr. Hartman.

Junior Hadassah Installs

Miss Carolyn Berenter last night was installed for a second term as president of Junior Hadassah at a dinner dance given at the Madrillon. Mrs. Moe Offenberg, the new president of the senior organization, was in charge of the installation ceremony.

Other new officers are: Miss Ruth Blond, first vice president; Miss Clara Berenter, sister of the president, second vice president; Miss Doris Raebach, third vice president; Miss Anne Rubinstein, treasurer; the Misses Ruth and Naomi Morganstein, corresponding secretaries; Miss Dorothy Legum, financial secretary; Miss Gertrude Gerber, recording secretary.

Other guests of honor were Mrs. Raphael, outgoing president of Senior Hadassah; Mr. Tour over, Rabbi and Mrs. Isadore Breslau and Mrs. Aaron Shalowitz, who has been acting as senior adviser to the junior group. Mr. Shalowitz, Edward Rosenblum, executive director of the Community Center, and Mrs. Rosenbloom.

Miss Gladys Asrael gave the opening prayer and there were greetings from the guests of honor. Miss Berenter also gave her annual report and the remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing. Miss Sylvia was chairman of the affair, assisted by Miss Ann Rich.

Eastern Star to Present Fashion Show Tonight

First of Four Garden Parties To Be Given on Grounds of Order's New 'Pink Palace'

A fashion show will be presented tonight in connection with the opening of a series of four garden parties given through the week by the Order of the Eastern Star on the grounds of the "pink palace" which the organization recently acquired at the corner of Sixteenth and Euclid streets. In case of rain the party will be transferred inside the house.

The property, formerly occupied by the widow of the late Marshall Field and after that by her niece, Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge and Senator Beveridge, will be used by women members of the order for club and fraternal meetings. Ruth S. Cromelin, worthy grand matron of the District of Columbia, appointed a committee from the 40 constituent chapters to have charge of arrangements for this week's parties. Mrs. Madella L. Smith, past matron of Lebanon Chapter, who is president of the General Temple Auxiliary Board, is chairman, with Ira Y. Bain, worthy patron of Harmony Chapter, as cochairman.

Temple Board Plans Fund Raising

The Temple Auxiliary Board was created with a membership of over 200 for the purpose of raising funds for the erection and equipment of a new temple building. This, according to plans under consideration, will be located at the corner of Euclid street and Mozart place and the cost is estimate dat $200,000. When this is built, the "pink palace" will be used chiefly for musicales, receptions, garden parties and other social activities of the order.

Other officers of the temple auxiliary board include Mrs. Irma Smith, past matron of Miriam Chapter, first vice president; Mrs. Lillian Bennett, past matron of William F. Hunt Chapter, second vice president; Miss Anne Guilford, past matron of Naomi Chapter, secretary, and Mrs. Florence E. Lewis, past matron of Hope Chapter, treasurer.

Committee members who are assisting Mrs. Smith and Mr. Bain include Theodore C. Lewis, past grand patron; Helen L. Brashears, Bertha G. Hudson, Tillie C. Chauncey, past grand matrons; Harry J. Schmidt, past grand patron; Selma S. Klein, Nora Riley, Anna Schmidkamp, Leila Cook, Rae Carl, Wildred D. Seal, Joseph Rice, Leroy Myers, James Stringfellow, John Batson and Herbert Middlemiss.

Different Chapters Attend Each Night

The 40 chapters in the District have been assigned different nights on which their members will attend. Tonight those represented will be Lebanon, Martha, Harmony, Washington Centennial, Naomi, Hope, Trinity, Treaty Oak, Chevy Chase and Brightwood.

Miss Guildord will be in charge of the candy booth; the cake booth will be presided over by Mrs. Margaret G. Davis, past matron of Lebanon Chapter, as chairman; Miss Salome Alger, past matron of Areme Chapter, No. 10, as chairman of the flower bar; a doll booth in charge of Mrs. Rose A. Virnstein, past matron of Brookland Chapter. Miss Ethel Towner, past matron of Martha Chapter, is chairman of the lemonade well; ice cream, good humors and popsicles will be sold at a booth under the direction of Ida Mae Selby; Mrs. Jean Allen, past matron of Mount Pleasant Chapter, is the chairman of the kitchen booth.

A fortune telling booth will be under the direction of Mrs. Blanche Peiser, past matron of Bethany Chapter; cigarettes will be sold by Miss Irene Schmidt.

From 5 until 7 o'clock each evening a supper will be served by a committee of which Mrs. Anna Hammond, past matron of Harmony Chapter, is chairman. There will be dancing in the main ballroom under the direction of Miss Blanche Bowen, past matron of Bethlehem Chapter. There will also be tables for cards in the State dining room of the "pink palace" in charge of Ruth Byer, past matron of Unity Chapter.

District P.-T. A Aides Named

New chairmen for the District Congress of Parents were announced yesterday at the final board meeting of the season, held at the headquarters in the National Education Association Building. Mrs. C. D. Lowe, the newly elected president, presided for the first time.

The immediate past president, Mrs. Walter B. Fry, was announced as chairman of hospitality; Mrs. Richard Alexander, of membership; Mrs. E. F. Koegel as editor of the news letter; Mrs. Leo Raywid, third division representative, and Mrs. Riley Elgen, citizenship chairman.

The board accepted with regret the resignation of Mrs. J. Phil Campbell as second vice president. Mrs. Campbell will spend much of her time in Georgia during the coming year and is unable to continue her work in the organization. It was under her direction that the congress undertook its successful dental demonstration project.

Mrs. Fry, Mrs. P. C. Elleit and Mrs. Gene Starr were named as a nominating committee to present the name of a candidate for second vice president to succeed her. The committee will report at the September board meeting.

Mrs. M. Joseph Hanley, chairman of the committee for handicapped children, announced 77 pairs of eyeglasses had been provided this year.

Mrs. Hancock Hostess To Park View Board

Mrs. W. O. Hancock, newly elected president of the Park View Woman's Club, will entertain members of the executive board at luncheon today at Vacation Lodge of the Y. W. C. A., Cherrydale, Va. Plans will be made for the next year's work.

The guests will be Mrs. A. H. O. Rolle, Mrs. T. H. Faris, Mrs. Waugh P. Heygster, Mrs. William O. Gale, Mrs. Martha Kirby, Mrs. Lawrence Murray, Mrs. George Evans, Mrs. D. E. Clark, Mrs. George Jones, Mrs. Margaret Felton, Mrs. Ruth Stitt, Mrs. Theodore Naylor, Mrs. John McKay, Mrs. George Dalwick, Mrs. Ruth Morrell.

Women's City Club Supper Program Set for Tomorrow

Miss Marjorie Webster, president of the Woman's City Club, is in charge of the program following the weekly garden supper which will be held at the clubhouse on Jackson place tomorrow night.

Miss Webster will present Mrs. Rose Robinson Cohen, of the Children's Studios of Speech and Dramatic Art, with a group of her students. The children will give a series of scenes from familiar juvenile books, presenting them in costume. In addition, there will be special music by Mrs. Jewel Downs.

The supper will be at 6 o'clock in the clubhouse and the program in the music room at 7.

Mrs. Merle Thorpe Entertains Delta Gamma

Mrs. Merle Thorpe was hostess to the Delta Gamma alumnae of Washington at a buffet supper at her home on the Rockville pike last night. Assistant hostesses for the occasion will be Mrs. H. H. Jacobs, Miss Helen Dyer, Mrs. Vernon Stoutemyer, Mrs. Betty Heller, Mrs. Julian Conover, Miss Hazel Kirk, and Mrs. George Clark.

Juniors Plan Bazaar

The Junior League of Christ Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Gallatin streets northwest, will hold a lawn fete on Friday from 5 to 8 p. m. Ice cream, lemonade and homemade cake and candy will be sold.

Silver Bloc Slows Up Currency Bill

Inflation Group Also In Action; Barkley Scents a Filibuster

Amid rumblings of the word "filibuster," members of the Senate currency expansion and silver bloc showed a willingness yesterday to delay a vote on the devaluation bill in an apparent effort to wrest concessions from the Administration.

Debate dragged on in the chamber after an early attempt by Majority Leader Barkley to fix a time for voting on an amendment to the bill was defeated by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, a leader of the silver bloc. McCarran subsequently resorted to other parliamentary tactics of delay.

At the close of the session, Barkley was asked by reporters if he thought a filibuster was in progress. "It looks like one," he replied.

With the new fiscal year beginning July 1, the tax and relief bills as well as the devaluation bill must be passed within the next ten days to avoid a hiatus in the present functions of the Government. The devaluation bill extends for two years the President's right to maintain the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, to cut 9 more cents off the old gold value of the dollar and to continue the domestic silver purchase program.

However, McCarran and Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, are backing proposals which would guarantee a domestic silver price of $1.04 (contrasted with the world price of 43 cents), and would permit a $2,000,000,000 expansion of the currency. Thomas yesterday claimed 23 votes for the currency proposal.

The current Treasury price of silver is 64.64 cents, and thus far the Administration, despite the demands of the silver bloc, has refused to indicate what the price will be after June 30, if the silver purchase program is continued.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, warned that the stabilization fund might be used to advance credits to foreign countries in time of war, and asked the Senate to impose restrictions preventing such an eventuality.

Delegate's Wife Asks Separation

Towson, Md., June 20 (AP).—Mrs. Frederick H. Houck today filed a Circuit Court petition seeking separate maintenance from the Baltimore County member of the House of Delegates, saying he was "habitually intoxicated" and spent most of his time away from their Relay, Md., home.

She said they were married at Windsor, Ontario, in 1932 and have no children.

Christianity Can Destroy Isms, Luther League Youths Told

800 Youths Hear Rev. Heminghaus Md. U. Coliseum

Christianity holds the power to destroy the symbols of fascism, communism and naziism, the Rev. Carl Heminghaus, of Baltimore, last night told more than 800 youths at the University of Maryland.

They came by trains, automobiles and special buses from the plains of Texas, wearing their picturesque sombreros, boots and spurs; from Saskatchewan, Canada, 2,500 miles away, and from some 20 other States, to launch the fifth annual international convention of the Luther League of the American Lutheran Church.

Standing in Ritchie Coliseum, as the program opened, they watched a spotlight play on an American flag held by a white-clad girl on the platform; heard John Krumnein raise his voice in "O say, can you see, by the dawn's early light," then joined in the stirring anthem.

"Mighty Fortress Is Our God"

After a soloist sang " . . . My Maryland, My Maryland, . . ." another girl presented the colors of that State; then the Christian flag was brought forward.

"A Mighty Fortress Is Our God . . ." began Krumnein, and the throng lifted their voices in the Lutheran hymn of the Reformation. Climaxing that part of the program, a large cross was illuminated, and the young people sang the symbolic hymn of Lutheran youth " . . . All Christians Leagued Together."

The Rev. Mr. Heminghaus, bringing greetings on the occasion, shared the fellowship program with Ralph Williams, assistant dean of men, Maryland University; the Rev. George J. Grewenow, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, and the Rev. Alvin Matz, Fullerton, Md.. Games and contests were held later.

Today's program will open with Holy Communion at 8:30 a. m., and at 10:15 Dr. W. G. Sodt, stewardship secretary of the American Lutheran Church, will speak on "Under the Banner of Faith."

Following the opening business session at 11 a. m., over which John D. Stegenman, president of the Luthern League of the American Lutheran Church, will preside, greetings will be brought by Gov. O'Conor of Maryland and President H. C. Byrd, of Maryland University. Dr. M. Reu, of Dubuque, Iowa, acting president of the Warburg Lutheran Seminary, will speak and the Rev. H. C. Ziehe, San Antonio, Tex., will conduct the first devotional rites.

"Violated His Judicial Office"

Judge Chestnut heard out Manton's appeal, and then said in measured tones:

"In view of the nature of this case, as disclosed by the evidence, even this maximum sentence may seem inadequate . . . the defendant, . . . violated the most fundamental feature of his judicial office, which requires absolute impartiality and personal disinterestedness in the performance of his official duties, and agreed to use the power and influence of his great position to procure large sums of money by loans or otherwise from litigants, to bolster up his fading fortune."

Because of the unusual nature of the case Judge Chestnut was assigned here from Maryland by Chief Justice Hughes to hear it.

Even as Manton was making his extraordinary argument for a reversal, the circuit court which he formerly headed reinstated for reargument a case in which he had decided in favor of Dictograph Products Co., a patent infringment suit brought by the Shick Dry Shaver Co.

In the Manton trial the Government sought to show that the judge indirectly had been paid $50,000 by Archie M. Andrews, late head of Dictograph, to influence his decision.

Rebukes Judge Chestnut

Manton, elevated at the age of 38 to the Federal District Court by President Wilson and subsequently to the apppellate bench, cited case after case in his contention that he had been improperly convicted.

Now and again he rebuked Judge Chesnut, in scholarly but sharp language, for his alleged errors in the conduct of the trial.

"I protest and proclaim my innocence," he said at the outset, of any legal or moral wrongdoing in connection with this charge. . . . I gave to my judicial service industry, devotion and undivided allegiance.

". . . . The testimony came from the lips of confessed bribegivers and corroborating convicts taken from prison."

Speaking of Manton's case, Judge Chestnut remarked it was "for tunate" that it had "no conspicuous parallel in the history of English and American high judiciary since Francis Bacon, then Lord Chancellor of England, was deprived of office for a similar cause more than 300 years ago."

Cuba Bans Film

Havana, June 20 (INS).—On the complaint of the German legation in Cuba, the government tonight banned the motion picture "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? Bread, meat, potatoes? No wonder you're constipated; you probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines. It's this mass that helps a bowel movement.

The common sense thing to do is to eat a natural laxative food. Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast may give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's great intestinal-tonic, vitamin B$_1$. All-Bran is not a drug, not a medicine. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Midcity Playground Planned

Safety Proposal Drafted to Rectify D. C. Traffic Hazards And Delinquency

Plans for extension of the Anacostia River Parkway to Baltimore and extensive "chanelizing" of difficult intersections here to expedite local and through traffic were revealed at a dinner tendered District and Federal officials by the Keystone Automobile Club last night.

A proposal for a large midcity playground to rectify conditions in the section of asserted peak traffic hazards and delinquency also was discussed at the dinner meeting at the home of Mark Lansburgh, advisory board member.

The proposal for extending the Anacostia parkway road system, at least to Berwyn, Md., to connect with a fast route to Baltimore, and at its southern terminus with Virginia route No. 1, will be laid before the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission at its meeting tomorrow and Friday, John Nolen, jr., director of planning, revealed.

Divided Type Planned

According to plans, the highway would be of the divided type, with few intersections, and with underpasses to avoid bridges in its route along Anacostia River valley. The boulevard would be laid out so as to skirt points of congestion but would contact present radial routes entering Washington from Baltimore (such as Bennings road and Maryland avenue).

Appropriations and basic legislation have been realized for the acquiring of land as far as the Agricultural Research grounds near Berwyn, Md. From there the highway would sweep southwest along the Anacostia River, cross the District line near the National Training School, span the river on the bridge proposed at South Capitol street, and follow the Washington Channel to the Highway Bridge to connect with Route No. 1.

Funds will be available by July 1 for construction of the playground for which several alternate sites in the area north of New York avenue, east of Ninth street, west of North Capitol street, and south of Florida avenue, are being considered, Nolen said.

Sites for the playground whose primary purpose would be to keep children off the streets and relieve delinquency through suitable recreation are now being studied, it was said, with a view to zoning, land values, housing and traffic conditions.

Extensively Developed

The playground would be extensively developed with every form of recreational facilities and would cover several acres, Nolen asserted.

Highways Director H. C. Whitehurst declared work will commence July 1 on the "chanelizing" of 12 "multiple and irregular" intersections, 11 of them in the Northwest section.

The intersections will be revamped by construction of "safety islands" and relocating of curbing so as to separate opposing traffic lances crossing "multiple" intersections, as at present at New York and West Virginia avenues.

The twelve intersections on which work will first commence in channelizing of difficult intersections throughout the city are as follows: Sherman, New Hampshire avenues, and Park road; Eleventh street and Vermont avenue; Concord and Georgia avenues; Alaska and Georgia avenues; Fourth street and New Jersey avenue; Fourth and Cedar streets northwest; Second street and Massachusetts avenue; River road and Wisconsin avenue; Constitution and Virginia avenues; Third street and New York avenue; and Fourth street and Rhode Island avenue, all in northwest; and Second street and Maryland avenue, northeast.

Other speakers included Commissioner David A. McCoach, Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Myers (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer; Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown; George E. Keneipp, president of Keystone; William Berry, editor of the Keystone Motorist; Inspector W. E. Holmes, and Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge.

East Indians to Ask Congress Today for U. S. Citizen Rights

Professor, Chemist and Mechanic to Tell House Committee of Plight of 3,000 Who Immigrated Before Restriction of 1924

Three natives of India—a professor of sociology, a chemist and an automobile mechanic—will go before the House Immigration Committee this morning to ask restoration of the rights of United States citizenship for 3,000 of their countrymen.

They are Dr. Haridas T. Muzumdar, former lecturer in sociology at Howard University; Mubarek Ali Kahn, president of the India Welfare League, Inc., a onetime auto mechanic, and Ramlal Bajpal, chairman of the executive board of the league and a Brooklyn chemist.

According to Dr. Muzumdar, 3,000 Indians residing in this country, came here prior to adoption of the excluding East Indians from citizenship in 1924. Lacking citizenship status, these people, Dr. Muzumdar cited, are barred from owning land in some States and are generally denied relief and unemployment benefits and, in some cases, jobs. Many have lived in America for from 25 to 40 years, he said.

In event the committee is interested in the racial background of India, the delegation is prepared, Dr. Muzumdar said, to offer the testimony of experts that Indians are members of the Caucasian, or white, race. These, he said, would be the Rev. John Montgomery Cooper, Catholic University anthropologist, and Dr. Morris Shapiro, whom he identified as being associated with the Museum of Natural History, New York.

Traffic Officers Here to Wear Pith Helmets

The policeman's helmet—so characteristic of the sturdy defenders of the law in the days of tandem bicycles and handlebar mustaches—is coming back. But this time it's pith helmets.

Maj. Brown's recommendation that the new headgear be supplied to men on traffic duty at downtown intersections as a protection against the sun was approved yesterday by the Commissioners. The helmets will be tan-colored, and will differ from those commonly worn by African big game hunters in that the policeman's hat shield will be pinned to the front.

The Commissioners have authorized the expenditure of $50 to buy 25 helmets, which are expected to be issued next week.

Two Students Win Fair Essay Contest

Joseph N. Switkes, 16, student at Eastern High School, and Jane Fendrick, 12, student at Anacostia Junior High School, are prize winners in the essay contest sponsored by the Washington committee of the Women's Advisory Committee for the New York World's Fair, it was announced yesterday. They will receive their awards for the best essay on "The America of Tomorrow" at class day exercises at the schools today.

Mrs. C. C. Glover, jr., is chairman of the sponsoring committee.

Watch Your Salad!

Salads taken on picnics should be made fresh and packed in thermos bottles, Health Officer George C. Ruhland advised yesterday. He urged caution in preparation and refrigeration of salads to prevent growth of bacteria which cause food poisoning.

Capital News In Brief

Musical Thief at Large—

A taste for music seemed to have struck Washington's cultured underworld yesterday, as police heard complaints that musical instruments valued at more than $365 had been stolen from District residents and a high school band from Arkansas.

The 100-member band from El Dorado (Ark.) High School, lost a gold flugel horn, a tenor saxophone and a trombone, total value $195, which were selected by an unknown marauder from among the instruments in the baggage compartment of their bus.

During the day Allen Massie, of 1762 Columbia road northwest, told police his $100 saxophone had been stolen from his home, and Wallie Valentine, of 1406 Maryland avenue southeast, reported the loss of a $75 cornet, apparently taken from Eastern High School Monday morning. Allen Rubenstein, of 4921 Eighth street northwest, who left his trombone in a store in the 5900 block of Georgia avenue northwest while on his way to a dentist on Monday,

A Woman's Prerogative

An elderly woman who jumped off the seawall at Riverside drive near Constitution avenue and waded into the Potomac last night, changed her mind when she reached waist-deep water and screamed loudly for help.

Two New Yorkers visiting the city, Kaith Chandor and Consgrove LaBarre, pulled the woman to safety, and police rushed her to Emergency Hospital for treatment, later transferring her to Gallinger Hospital. She refused to identify herself.

Stewart to Speak

Elmer Stewart, secretary of the American Patent Law Association, will speak at 12:30 p. m. today at the weekly luncheon of the Federal Bar Association in the National Press Club.

Action Slated On Lunacy Commitment

2 Conferences on Making Law More Flexible Scheduled Today

Constructive action is expected to be taken today on two fronts to make the District's lunacy commitment law more flexible and thus relieve conditions at Gallinger Hospital's psychopathic ward which have been called medieval and sordid.

Barring a last-minute postponement, which is possible, a group of District officials and others whose identities were not divulged, will meet this morning at the Budget Bureau in executive session to be questioned on proposed amendment of the existing law.

Meantime a delegation representing the District Bar Association will confer with Representative Vreeland (Republican), of New Jersey, author of a bill which would abolish the commission on mental health and transfer its duties to the health officer.

Another Hearing Likely

The Budget Bureau, it was learned, may hold another hearing after the one today before reaching a decision on the amendments and forwarding it to the Commissioners. The principal change under consideration provides for elimination of the compulsory ten-day detention period in Gallinger's psychopathic ward before the court passes judgment in an insanity case.

Members of the bar group scheduled to be received by Vreeland are H. Mason Welch, Stanley H. Fischer, Austin F. Canfield and Lawrence Koenigsberger.

Welch, chairman of a special committee appointed by the bar association to study the problem, and Fischer last week told The Post they believe the commission form of lunacy investigation should be continued but the law amended to permit temporary commitments to St. Elizabeths Hospital and thus relieve congestion and comingling of the sane and insane at Gallinger.

Vreeland Stands Pat

Vreeland, however, has shown no signs of altering his position that the commission should be abolished. His bill, which was favorably reported last week by the House District Committee, has not yet been sent to the Budget Bureau for scrutiny. It is scheduled to be called up on the House calendar next Monday.

Whether through enactment of the Vreeland measure or amendment of the existing law, which is only one year old, restoration of temporary commitments to St. Elizabeths and abandonment of the criticized 10-day detention period at Gallinger is almost certain before the adjournment.

Last Sunday The Post reported the case of a 9-year-old boy, held for mental observation, placed in the same ward room at Gallinger with a man patient who was so violent he had to be strapped to the bed. The two have been separated, it was learned yesterday.

2,500 Receive Diplomas in Commencements Of 14 Junior High and Vocational Schools Here

Exercises Are Slated For Eight More Junior High Schools

Nearly 2,500 Washington children were graduated in commencement exercises at 14 junior high and vocational schools yesterday, while students of eight other junior schools awaited graduation ceremonies today.

Graduating yesterday were students of the Francis Browne, Garnet Patterson, Terrell, Macfarland, Eliot, Gordon, Paul, Jefferson, Langley and Taft junior high schools, and the Margaret Murray Washington, Dennison and Abbot vocational schools.

Against a background of American flags, members of the graduating class at Macfarland Junior High presented a colorful historic pageant, "America Speaks," to open the commencement ceremonies. Among students who reviewed the heritage of America were Maren Dunkl, Raymond Simms, Daniel Levine, David Kraft, George O'Brien and Henry George.

Students' Pledges

Student pledges to "the faith of our fathers," the country and the flag, were presented by Betty Saks, Esther Hansen, George Stathopoulos and Marvin Lerner. Rosemary Schmutzer, class president, gave the class presents, an electric eraser cleaner, and set of bells for the school orchestra, to the school principal, H. P. Safford. Diplomas were awarded by Dr. Thomas Gosling, assistant superintendent of schools.

At Eliot Junior High, Mrs. A. I. Kinnear, principal, presented gold, silver and bronze "E's" awarded for high citizenship records, to 92 students, including Frances Stephenson, who set a new school citizenship record with 650 points, and Floyd B. Brookens, class presdient. They will receive a second citizenship award from the Government Printing Office Post, No. 33, of the American Legion, at 1 p. m. today at the school. Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, conferred the diplomas.

Langley Junior High

Graduation exercises at Langley Junior High School opened with the trooping of the colors by a Boy Scout color guard, followed by the invocation by the Rev. Samuel H. Kornmann and an address of welcome by Philip Fessenden Warner, president of the graduating class.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, member of the Board of Education, presented the diplomas after the honor roll had been read by the class secretary, Ellen Imogen Hodges, and after Principal Harry Baker, jr., had cited numerous members of the class for services to the school. Jean Elizabeth Gochenour was valedictorian. The class gift of $50, following similar gifts by previous classes, will make possible the installation of the long-desired public address system in the auditorium this fall.

The senior class of Paul Junior High School received their certificates from R. L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, after five members of the class had talked on "a worthy life," describing what the school had given them in preparation for useful living. They were Donald Wolfe, Mary Lou Garvin, Eugene Fry, James Cunningham and Dorothy Fitzgerald.

"A Day at Jefferson"

The award for highest scholastic average was given to Donald Wolfe. The school choir and orchestra provided music.

"A Day at Jefferson" was the subject of a pageant presented by Jefferson Junior High School students at their graduation exercises last night in the Stuart Junior High School auditorium. In brief speeches the students told what they had learned, hour by hour, through a typical school day.

John Laycock, class vice president, and Nannie Combs received the American Legion citizenship medals, and Francis Simpson and Lucille Donahue the Daughters of the American Revolution citizenship medals. The silver cup for citizenship went to John Laycock, N. A. Danowsky, statistician of the District Public Schools, presented the certificates.

As a class gift, the graduates presented to the school two plaques in honor of retiring teachers, Margaret Carraher and Mary Stewart.

At Taft Junior High School the American Legion awards went to Howard William Keithley and Mary Louise Harrison, and the D. A. R. awards to William Homer Stannard and Elizabeth Ruth Hosterman. Birch E. Bayh, head of the department of physical education, presented the diplomas after a pageant entitled "The Story of Our Towns." Members of the graduating class portrayed the history of the Northeast section of Washington from earliest times to the present in the pageant, of which William Homer Stannard was stage manager.

Dennison Vocational

Graduates of the Dennison Vocational School heard an address by William Lowman, head of the research department of the Hecht Co., at graduation exercises. He urged them to "continue to become more skillful, add knowledge to your skill and fit it in with your knowledge of the community in which you live. Remember that skill is not all you have to sell; you have in addition to sell yourselves," he added. Miss Jessie La Salle, assistant superintendent of schools, presented the diplomas, and Virginia Miller, president of the graduating class, gave the valedictory address.

Twenty Abbot Vocational School students received certificates or diplomas from W. F. Smith, principal, following a commencement address by Maurice W. Acers, of the FBI. The graduates were James Madison Deuterman, William Morgan Ward, Louis Wolfe Meder, John Sirola, Philip Thompson Woodward and Carl Ellis McMakin, electricity students; Elwood Randall Davis, Timothy Matthew Murphy and Gregory Donald Norris, painting; Pasquale Anthony Iacangelo, Dennis Garland Costello, Raymond Frederick Murphy, Ezekiel John Vito, plumbing; William Ivan Gourley, Richard Albert Holmes and Sidney Miller, sheet metal; Edward Harrison Dore, George Irving Neilson, printing; Calvin Leo Walker, woodwork, and Burt Morris Kurtz, auto mechanics.

Gordon Junior High

Frank A. Woodward, principal, gave diplomas to a class of 244 boys and girls at Gordon Junior High. Presiding at the commencement program was Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools.

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools, gave certificates to the graduating class of Margaret Murray Washington Vocational School, following presentation of a history of vocational education by eight members of the research club, Marion Summers, chairman; Alyce German, Lillian Gordon, Edna White, Loretta Preston, Mamie Smith, Victoria Wise and Wilhelmina Jenkins.

A book award for school service was given to Angella Ferguson, president of the graduating class at Francis Junior High, while American Legion Character awards went to Hugh Proctor and Alice Paige. Col. West A. Hamilton, of the Board of Education, awarded the diplomas.

A senior at Dunbar High school, Annie Mae Miller, gave the commencement address at Garnet Patterson's graduation ceremonies. Dr. Howard H. Long, assistant superintendent of schools, awarded diplomas. American Legion awards were given to Duaine Grant and Velma Atkins. Elena Johnson was highest scholar.

A list of students who were graduated yesterday was printed in last Sunday's edition of The Post.

Farley Addresses Chevy Chase, Bethesda Class

"These troubled times are a challenge that this generation throws at the feet of the young men and women who will be the leaders of tomorrow," Postmaster General Farley told the Chevy Chase-Bethesda High School graduating class at Bethesda, Md., last night.

He asserted that the student of today more than ever before is in need of a trained mind, warning the graduates:

"You must be prepared, after you have established yourself in some occupation, to make your contribution in helping solve these large problems which affect us all."

Other Washington Graduations Will Be Held Today

Court Allows Race Wire Action Against Phone Co.

The West Virginia Supreme Court yesterday in effect upheld an indictment charging the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company with "unlawfully" transmitting horse racing results which were used in a pool room for gambling purposes, according to the Associated Press.

The Court said the Berkeley County Circuit Court was correct in overruling a demurrer to the indictment, which was returned last December.

R. A. Van Orsdel, general consel for the company here, said the company "did not have the remotest knowledge" of the purpose to which the phone was being used until the indictment was returned.

In the demurrer, the company had questioned the constitutionality of the statute, and pointed out the indictment did not allege the company "knowingly" committed an offense.

Kaemmerer Elected

R. J. A. Kaemmerer was elected nominator by the Optimists Club of Washington yesterday for the organization's international convention which will be held in Richmond, Va., next week.

Judiciary Reviews D. C. Guardsmen

1,500 Parade Before Brig. Gen. Cox; Sergt. Phillips Gets Saber Of Military Order

The Capital's judiciary were honored last night by the tramp of marching feet, as 1,500 uniformed District National Guardsmen passed in review before them and the guard commander, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox.

At the same time, an officer's saber, the top award of the District Chapter, Military Order of the World War, was presented to First Sergt. Stanley W. Phillips, Company F, 121st Engineers, who received the highest ratings of those who qualified for second lieutenant in the branch examinations for the commission. The saber was presented by Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commander of the District Chapter. Phillips is a Government Printing Office employe.

Those in whose honor the review was held included representatives from the Justice Department, judges of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, District, Claims, Customs and Patent Appeals, Municipal and Police Courts.

Medals were awarded to the winning company of the National Guard Bureau's indoor rifle shoot, captured by the Headquarters and Service Company, 121st Engineers. Medals went to Capt. Edward A. McMahon, team captain; Technical Sergt. Frank B. Kaye, coach, and Sergt. Sterling E. Chambers, Sergt. Merrill A. Turner, Corporal John F. Bradbury, Private Willard C. Jensen and Private Arthur H. Ross.

Shirley Tames Redskins In Shivery 'Western'

BELL

THOSE INDIANS evidently didn't like railroads.

It will be recalled that the more or less noble Redmen played a little havoc along the way of Mr. De Mille's development of his far-flung story of "Union Pacific." They did the white invaders no good whatever, even if they were finally suppressed and the railroad did go through. There is something like that in "Susannah of the Mounties," Twentieth Century-Fox's new starring vehicle for Shirley Temple, which was previewed yesterday afternoon by a quorum of the drama desks.

It seems that back about 1882-84 the Canadian Pacific was encountering about the same difficulties that harassed Mr. De Mille's Union Pacific. All of the trouble—fortunately for the melodramatic interest of the story of "Susannah"—took place within easy reach of an outpost of the Canadian Royal Mounted, who would have done all right with a friendly Indian chieftain had it not been for a renegade brave who cooked up a considerable mess, by raiding the whites, stealing their horses, destroying wagon trains and otherwise carrying on like all possessed. That was eventually all ironed out, as the saying goes, by little Susannah Sheldon, sole survivor of the massacre of her grandfather's expedition into a far country.

Susannah was quite a kid. Blessed with Miss Temple's persistent ambition to be of help, Susannah takes possession of practically every department of the Mounties' post after her rescue. She even goes so far as to develop a bit of intense jealousy when Inspector Angus Montague, "Monty," her rescuer, shows signs of falling in love with Vicky Standing, daughter of the commandant, out from Toronto for a visit to the wilds. This is a little ahead of Miss Temple's years in the estimation of an old bachelor who doesn't know too much about such things.

At any rate, Susannah barges in where angels ordinarily would fear to tread and in the end saves the day by a personal appeal to the aged Chief Black Eagle, just as Monty is about to be burned at the stake. It might not work out precisely like that in actuality, but Director William A. Seiter has made it all very exciting nevertheless.

Sometimes Drags

Perhaps that is a slight overstatement. There are times when a desire to "show off" the precocious Temple's expanding ability as an actress slows the action down a bit, but that can be forgiven in view of the charm of the juvenile star to whom the lagging footages are devoted. This all happens early in the movement of the story. Once those Blackfeet Indians—and they are authentic Blackfeet, recruited from the Government reservation in Montana—get into war-frenzied action, "hellzapoppin'." You never saw so many Indians in your life. And a right blood-thirsty pack they were, too, until Susannah told them off and put the renegade Wolf Pelt in his place—which was the hoosegow, or wherever it is Indians toss their bad boys.

But perhaps we had better get to the point. For the first time in her life Shirley Temple has been cast in the stellar role of a rip-snorting "Western." She comes through with flying colors, as usual. If adults are able to detect dramaturgic flaws in the structure of "Susannah of the Mounties," the kids, at least, will "eat it up." It is another "natural" for the diminutive Duse and should thrive at the box office, as you will discover when it opens on F street day after tomorrow.

"Susannah of the Mounties," by the way, marks Margaret Lockwood's first appearance in an American-made film. You will find her as charming in a role that places no great demands upon her capabilities, as she was, say, in "The Lady Vanishes" or any of the other British-made films in which she has been seen on this side. One wishes, however, that her opportunities might have been a little greater.

Those who may have entertained any doubts concerning the "pulling power" of an open-air theater dedicated exclusively to automobile "drive-in" trade, should know that business has been so great at the Mount Vernon, auto-ramp theater down on the Richmond highway a few miles below Alexandria, in Virginia, that an innovation will be inaugurated by Manager Shapiro this Saturday night in an effort to take care of the motor cavalcade that presents itself at his gates.

This will take the form of an extra midnight show, beginning at 12 o'clock, en punto, as we say in the pure Castilian—well, pure enough, anyway. This is not a one-night experiment, but will be continued every Saturday night hereafter. The first night performance on Saturday will begin at 8, but you still will be able to see the entire bill if you do not arrive on your favorite ramp until 12 p. m. The feature this Saturday night will be "Roberta," with Irene Dunne, Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire in the costellar roles. So now you know.

Comes a wire from Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, advising that "The Sun Never Sets," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Basil Rathbone, Virginia Field and C. Aubrey Smith, positively will open on Fifteenth street this Thursday. This seems not to be so important to us as the fact that "The Mikado" fulfilled this department's wary prognostication of a three-week run. It did splendid business all of the way and deserved it. If you did not see this Universal Technicolor production, you should have.

Those "Playhouse Puppeteers" coming to the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday are a purely local product. Fostered by Marionettes, Inc., this enterprise has been active for something like seven years in Washington, two years since its incorporation. It is fostered by a group all of whom formerly were associated with the Junior League. It is interesting to note that all of the puppets used in the performance were designed and fashioned by Louise de Graffenreid Woolley, daughter of the former newspaper man who has been Interstate Commerce Commissioner and the occupant of other high Government posts.

If you wish to know how not to perform parlor tricks, by all means see Bob Benchley in "Dark Magic," which also was previewed yesterday. As a magician, Mr. Benchley is still a fine writer! The new frolic has been added to the bill opening tomorrow at Loew's Palace, when "Invitation to Happiness," costarring Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray will be the feature.

Sticking-to-Your-Undershirt Note

A New Romantic Screen 'Triangle'

MARGARET LOCKWOOD, SHIRLEY TEMPLE, RANDOLPH SCOTT as they appear in the principal roles in "Susannah of the Mounties," the growing Miss Temple's latest starring vehicle for Twentieth Century-Fox, which opens Friday as chief feature of the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater. Believe it or not, the diminutive Miss Temple and Margaret Lockwood, appearing in her first American-made film, are bitter "love rivals" in this wild and woolly opus

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 20.

" . . . and the baby saw a picture of Mae West, and pleaded for it . . . Oh, no—of course I didn't give it to him . . . What? . . . No, not because he's too young. I didn't give it to him because he didn't say 'Please.'."

11 P. M.: "Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., has a $50 bet with his brother, Jimmy," a Washington official informs at the Paradise. "Jimmy bet that there'd be a war in Europe before February" . . . "I wish Max Schmeling would return to America," Hank Greenberg sighs at the Riviera. "When Max was here last I played skill-ball with him every night—and won $500 from him" . . . "I'd like to see Alec Woollcott," Miriam Hopkins states at the Persian Room. "He said I had given him 'one moist, unnegotiable kiss.'"

12 P. M.: "Please don't mind me," Ambassador Bullitt tells the excited headwaiters at the Cotton Club. "I'm here just to get out of the rain" . . . "You were half-right," Paul Robeson corrects at Cafe Society. "I did go to New York University Law School—but was graduated from Columbia." "It's the mid-West and the red-necks who make this country of ours," Roark Bradford declares at Sardi's. "I've always felt that if we could cut off some of the East—like New York, Boston and Washington—we'd eliminate whatever troubles America has."

1 A. M.: "I wish," Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue complains at the Rainbow Room, "people wouldn't insist on inventing romances for my boys" . . . "Tonight it's as cold as a California night," Will Hays tell his wife. "Please," she reminds, "don't talk shop" . . . "I saw Noel Coward in London," a returned voyager reports at the Swing Club, "and asked him whether he'd written anything lately. 'Sixty thousand words,' Coward replied, 'and I love every damn one of them.'"

2 A. M.: Elliott Roosevelt confides at the Stork Club, "I'll present on my radio program an Italian aviator who flew his plane into France, because he didn't want to fight against the Spanish Loyalists. He stowed away on a ship to America, and now is on Ellis Island. If he's shipped back to Italy he'll be sentenced to death" . . . While the Sonny Kendis Orchestra blares, S. J. Perelman turns to Donald Ogden Stewart, and asks: "Do you think this it what Thoreau had in mind?" . . . "A booking agent I know tried to sell Hobby Lobby a man whose hobby was printing money at home," Charles Barnet states at the Famous Door, "but they couldn't get permission from the warden, to put a microphone in his cell"

3 A. M.: "I just got this note from the Duke of Windsor," Dwight Fiske confides at the Savoy-Plaza. "He really intends coming over here next winter." "Last year I tried to get a show placed at the Frisco Fair, but they paid no attention to me," Billy Rose reports at the 18 club. "Well, last week my Aquacade played to 195,000 customers. During the same period, the entire Frisco Fair had only 164,000 customers" . . . "Herb Polesie, who directs the Bing Crosby pictures, brought a pair of dark eyeglasses to me," Garson Kanin, Hollywood's newest excitment, tells Sam Levene at Tony's. "Herb said that his eyeglass was an amazing discovery, which would chase moviegoers right back to the theater. 'They just put 'em on, during a Technicolor movie,' Herb explained, 'and when they see only black-and-white film, they start loving the stage again.'"

4 A. M.: "Isn't it swell," F. D. Roosevelt, jr., elates at El Morocco. "I mean my mother—having her column accepted by the New York Times. The Times!" "I bought my pop his first tuxedo," Jack Dempsey relates at the Versailles. "He couldn't get out of the stiff wingcollar, so he placed a wet towel around it, to soften it, and went to sleep that way, still wearing the tuxedo. He wore it all the next day—except he put on a red tie."

5 A. M.: "Norman Hartnel designed Queen Elizabeth's clothes," a Britisher states at the Gay Nineties. "During their visit to Paris, the Queen told Hartnel: 'I'm so pleased with my dresses, let's have some champagne at the Elysee Palace.' That's why the royal procession was 7 minutes late." . . . "Elaine Barrie isn't finished with the theater," an agent assures at the Pierre Roof. "She probably will do some work with Leonard Sillman's revivals in the fall."

6 A. M.: "And they're coming to dinner tonight—so we'll all dine on the terrace . . . What, dear? . . . Suppose it rains before the dinner is over? . . . Then we'll give 'em rain checks."

Sylvan Theater Opens Season With 'Cyrano'

Always official, Washington last night bowed to the almanac's dictum that June 21 marks the first day of summer and ushered in the season with the opening of the Sylvan Theater. Squatted on the grassy hillside, an audience of slightly more than 3,000 enjoyed the Blackfriars Guild in "Cyrano de Bergerac" and a concert by the Washington Gas Light Coompany Employes' Band.

Unique in Washington, the Sylvan is a beautiful summer setting for theatrics an almost natural bowl, with a stage of grass and an ideal slope, with lounging space for thousands. Most of the "seat locations" are free and the succeeding Tuesday evenings of this annual summer series will see audiences larger than last night's.

The Blackfriar's "Cyrano" was performed in more accustomed surroundings earlier in the spring with much the same cast. Last night's was an enjoyable performance, better than the former one. Again, Denis Connell had the title role and played with more bravura and even more nose than he had before In other words, Mr. Connell shined up his well-known reputation as one of the city's finest resident actors.

Evelyn Meade was an attractive Roxane and Gregory Crawley was the Christian. Carlton Ayers, Richard Boulger, E. Francis McDevitt, William Leggate, Joseph Peacon, Margaret Frawley, Edna Evans, Gertrude Heagney and Jack Wilson were others in the Rev. Gilbert V. Hartke's capably directed company.

The band concert, which preceded the Rostand play, was under the direction of Otto Siebeneichen. The Summer Festivals are under the supervision of the Community Center Department and the Office of the National Capital Parks.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 20 (INS).—You'd have to look a long way before you would find a more relieved bunch than the M-G-M crowd today, when Richard Rosson long distanced Winfield Sheehan and told him that he had the background film he had photographed in Vienna for "The Emperor's Stallion." Rosson was arrested by the Nazi government as a spy and held prisoner for over a week, but after many strings were pulled and many contacts made, he was permitted to depart with his precious reels.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Surprising to hear that Robert Taylor will start work as the trainer-hero in "The Emperor's Stallion" within a month, with Laraine Day playing the archduchess. You probably thought Bob and Laraine were on location with the "Northwest Passage" company, but remember we told you Bob didn't want to leave his bride. The horses in this film are the famous Lillizans, only seven of which are in this country, and they belong to Mrs. Sheehan (Mme. Jeritza).

Heard through the grapevine route, that Ginger Rogers has been making secret tests for Esmeralda in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." She wasn't interested, until she heard that Charles Laughton was arriving to play the Lon Chaney role. Then she listened to Pandro Berman and lost no time getting herself before the camera. Heard also that Perc Westmore, who did all Paul Muni's extraordinary makeups, has been borrowed from Jack Warner to put the finishing touches on Laughton for Quasimodo. Ginger would again be associated with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who plays the poet.

Europe was in the leaves at the bottom of Ann Sothern's teacup this morning. Victor Saville, producer of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and "The Citadel," has begged for her, to play opposite Robert Montgomery in "Busman's Holiday." That's because he saw Ann in "Maisie," the surprise movie of the year, a picture that no one on the M-G-M lot knew or ever cared was being made, and which is better than the majority of pictures. Now it's up to Ann. She was supposed to do another J. Walter Ruben production, but M-G-M will ask her to go to England for Saville and, if she does, Montgomery's movie will have a far better chance of succeeding as popular entertainment.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Adrian, under cross-examination, admitted today that he and Janet Gaynor will be one, in the fall; Venita Varden and Jack Oakie, between quarrels, are happy again; Bette Davis has a bad case of laryngitis, another reason why "Elizabeth and Essex" is held up; reminds me that it's September, and not December that Bette and George Brent face the preacher; John Farrow trid to persuade Mrs. Vanderbilt to let R-K-O make a test of young Gloria, but she refused; Lupe Velez whooping it up at Earl Carroll's with her latest, a young man no one seemed to know; Robert Leonard, minus 40 pounds, looks like a juvenile; Greta Garbo may go into another picture immediately and forget her annual trek to Sweden; Harry Ritz is limping around with a sprained sacroiliac; Jeanette MacDonald paid a visit to the M-G-M lot today, so it won't be long now until everything is settled; Andy McLaglen, Vic's boy, just took his entrance exams to Princeton; wonder if it's true Jeffrey Lynn is secretly wed?

Natalie Draper and Brian Aherne really having fun at the La Conga; Amanda Duff, who will shortly wed Phillip Dunne, is wearing a star sapphire and diamond engagement ring; Para's greatest trouble is in getting Isa Miranda not to act like Marlene Dietrich.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Cal., June 20.—I talked recently with a California State income tax man who told me some interesting things about the film industry and its stars. He said that the authorities realize that stars and players are taxed too high for their short producing years. The hardest hit are the in - and - outers, those who make a terrific hit one year and vanish the next. Writers, designers and other studio artists move so often it costs the State a fortune to chase them from one location to another. The average life of a star for top money has been cut down from ten to five years, now that there are so few long term contracts.

HOPPER

He marveled at Twentieth Century-Fox's financing oddities. For instance, the cost accruing from Arthur Treacher, who hadn't worked for some time, was so great that even though producers wanted him they wouldn't assume the burden. Finally, Sol Wurtzel did, and for one scene in his picture the cost was $36,000.

The movie industry has the most appalling waste and strangest system of accounting in the whole world, this tax expert declared. But it's players who suffer in the long run. They wrestle with unfair prices for all they buy, because of a reputation of wealth they don't own and battle with the fans whose caprices increase daily.

A new slant. And a just one, says I!

Noticed the other night at Delhaven's that soda sipping has replaced cocktails. Among the sippers were Eleanor Powell, the Huxleys, Anita Loos, Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard.

I asked Walter Wanger if he'd give Joan Bennett away if she weds Woody Donohue. He said: "Certainly, if it would make her happy."

Alex Steinart spent three days in San Francisco with the Pierre Monteux. He solos when Pierre conducts orchestra at the Bowl this summer.

What an ad for the Bubble Bath. Joan Crawford said she bubbled for eleven hours in "The Women" and lost eleven pounds. Which put her in bed for two days. What price purity?

That Roosevelt family loves water, too. Jimmy's just bought a $12,000 yacht.

Kay Aldrich is proud of the fact that she kept the Maharajah waiting half an hour while she got sewed into a new dress. Maybe she doesn't know it's bad manners to boast.

Wherever there's honey, you'll find a bee. Carole Lombard has to knock out one side of her house because bees got bottled up by mistake.

And speaking of bees, Fibber McGee turned his back on one of his the other day when he was milking a cow, and the bee took an unfair advantage of him.

Did you know that a team of women write those Westerns for Republic? Don't shoot, boys!

Sam Goldwyn heard that Emil Boreo mixes syllables better than he. So went to "Folies Bergere" to compare. Boreo had laryngitis. Said Sam: "Why, that guy even pantomines with an accent."

For no reason at all, Sonja Henie sent me a huge bottle of Schiaparelli's "Shocking" perfume before she sailed away. And I do smell shocking?

Funniest gift of the week. Neville Fleeson's new set of teeth for his mother's birthday. "The better to bite you with, my dear," said she.

Jack Morgan, author of "Man of Two Worlds" completed his round-the-world trip on that private yacht, but stopped off at the ancestral home of Lord Northumberland, where he's finishing another novel. Wife Phyllis has already returned with such tall tales she may write one, too.

*X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1939 17

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

James Brooklyn DeShong, the Nats' smartest dresser and, according to this year's records, their worst pitcher, has been booted upstairs onto the roster of the New York Yankees. The Yanks claimed him yesterday, at the $7,500 waiver price, and therein the vagaries of baseball again are interested.

POVICH

With the Nats this season, DeShong's pitching fortunes were at their lowest ebb. For two years he had been a receding asset of the Nats. At the end of the 1937 season he took a tremendous salary cut and at contract-talking time last winter he was obliged to take another amputation in his wages. He could present little argument to ward them off, because he had not been a winning pitcher.

DeShong had failed to go the route this season. He did not win any game he started, and he had been impressive in only one relief role. If he stayed in the league he would take another pay cut next spring. The picture wasn't very exciting to the well-tailored DeShong. And so what happens? Nothing except that he is bought by the Yankees, a team that will laugh its way into the pennant, and shunt DeShong a sizable share of the World Series spoils.

That is the picture on the face of it, but DeShong may not be too ready to receive his transfer to the Yankees with great joy. Because while the Yankees are the Yankees, next door is Newark, the Yanks' minor league farm, and Newark beckons every backsliding big leaguer on the New York roster. DeShong is away from the second-division Nats, but it may be simply a step down via the Yankees.

Yanks Won't Play With Losers

Thus DeShong may not profit from what appears to be a providential release to the Yankees, the club that every pitcher in the league would like to join. With the Nats he would at least stay in the big leagues even if he does not stage a comeback and produce a winning season. But with the Yankees, his term will be short-lived unless he is a winner. They have too many pitchers who are winners and they don't trifle with losers.

Certainly there is reason for belief that the Yankees have bought DeShong with a view to sending him ot Newark. They have mall grounds for belief that he will stage a remarkable reversal of form and be a winner with them. His work with Washington during the past two seasons would not indicate that. And for DeShong the all-too-harrowing fact is that the Yankees are greatly concerned by the failures of its Newark farm team.

Newark, pennant-winner in the International League for the past three years, is now trailing the Rochester Club, a Cardinal farm, and the Jersey City Club, a branch of the Giants. George Weiss, manager of the Yankee farm system, is no little irked by the threat of the Giants' Jersey City Club to beat out the Yanks' Newark team, and recently sent Roy Hughes, infielder acquired from St. Louis, to bolster Newark. The Yanks are the kind of a club that could afford to pay $7,500 for a pitcher to send to Newark, and that pitcher may be DeShong.

And Griffith Seems to Be Winner

It's strictly up to DeShong, though. The chances are he'll get his chance with the Yankees. He may click, but as we were saying there is nothing in his record to indicate it. The winner on the deal appears to be Clark Griffith who got $7,500 for a pitcher who wasn't doing his club any good.

The deal, though, is an illustration of the manner in which the now waiver rule works in favor of the ball players. Waivers had been asked on DeShong once before this summer with the Detroit and Cleveland clubs claiming him, and then the waivers were withdrawn by Griffith. When DeShong's name appeared on the waiver list last week and the Yankees claimed him, Griffith was required to release DeShong under the new rule adopted last winter which forbids club owners from withdrawing waiver requests a second time. Thus DeShong, unwanted in Washington, gets a break.

The DeShong transfer is the final chapter of the story of the midwinter deal of 1935 wherein DeShong came to Washington in exchange for Irving Hadley, who went to the Yankees. The last chapter contributes nothing to Griffith's reputation for trading sagacity. The Yankees have wound up with both Hadley and DeShong in exchange for $7,500.

In 1936, it appeared the Nats had far the better of the deal. DeShong was the most consistent Washington pitcher, winning 18 games that year, and Hadley was a flop with the Yankees. Manager Joe McCarthy frankly admitted that he had been stung on the deal. But later events proved it was the Yanks who profited from the trade. DeShong has not had a winning season since 1936, and Hadley has not had a losing one.

In 1937, DeShong won 14 games and lost 15 compared to Hadley's 11 wins and 8 defeats, and in 1938 while Hadley was winning 9 and losing 8, DeShong could show only 5 victories against 8 defeats. This year with DeShong still victory-less and showing three defeats, Hadley has 6 wins against 1 loss. Add up, DeShong has won 19 and lost 26 during the three seasons while Hadley has won 26 against 17 losses. It should prove something.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 20.—A not so recent piece of ours, concerning the so-called new deal in athletics at the University of Pittsburgh, brought a piercing yell of rage from the pro-Sutherland sector of the alumni. The Panthers' athletic and publicity departments, bombarded for a reason why such a story was given out, fell back on the traditional plea of "misquoted," but it doesn't seem to have satisfied such friends of the former coach as are behind the quiet investigation now being made of certain Pitt officials.

CONSIDINE

We were inadvertently wrong when we wrote that Pitt does not own the land on which its tower of learning and the Heinz Chapel are located. We were confused by the school's complicated sale, for $1, of certain nearby parcels of land on which the city has erected a fine string of medical institutions. We're sorry about that error.

The rest of the story was printed as it was told to us. Instead of enlarging on the current regime's antipathy toward Sutherland we deliberately toned down that portion. For instance, we did not think it particularly fair, or kind, to reproduce the new regime's contemptuous estimate of the number of students who actually engaged in the "strike," when Sutherland was forced out. As much as possible we diluted quotations which tended to point up the purity of post-Sutherland football of Sutherland's era.

Jock's Teams Did Pay Interest

The Pitt baseball diamond, which we were told was cut in the sacred turf of Pitt Stadium after Sutherland left, was actually cut in there a year before he went, if anybody gives a hang. Jock's teams, who hardly made enough to pay the $100,000 a year interest on the stadium bonds, we were told, actually did a little better than pay it. We were told that in line with the reputedly new breath of fresh air around the Panther campus, that more students came out for football this spring than at any time during Sutherland's regime, though it is now learned from the pro-Sutherlands that only 49 showed up this year as opposed to more than 100 during the average Sutherland years. The pro-Sutherlands, it might be added, in the interests of balance, say I was cold bloodedly taken in by a group of schemers who, having worked to oust Sutherland, now want to kick him when he's down. Perhaps so, but it's difficult to find the exact truth in as hysterical and hypocritical a sector of sports as college athletics.

Sutherland was thinking for a time of entering suit aginst the university, on the grounds that the reflections on him would work against his getting a job anywhere else as a coach. But he had reconsidered. At present he is at leisure—and as curious a case as ever haunted the closet of sports. He was hired to give the university of Pittsburgh a great high-pressure football team. He did; so they did everything but kick him out.

They're Often Fired for Competence

Jock will come up with another goodpaying football job, for there is no more competent coach in the land. But in the end the new school probably will let him go again, after it has had its belly filled with football success and wants to make at least a good pretense at returning to its primary purpose of furthering culture. To be fired for competence is the inevitable fate of every great coach.

Joe Jacobs' boomeranging ballyhoo—the charge that Louis used a "gimmick" in his paw the night he half killed Max Schmeling—was almost the perfect crime. Pictures of the fight lend a certain circumstantial evidence to the screwy Jacobs charge. For instance Julian Black is always the last man to leave Louis, when the bell rings and the seconds climb down the stairs. But the night he fought Schmeling, Louis' last intimate in his corner was Eddie Mead, fondly regarded in the old days as a past master of slipping iron bolts into his fighters' gloves. Eddie gave Joe a close-to-the-belly handshake, a moment before Louis went out to the slaughter. And the moment the fight was stopped, Black rushed through the ropes, ran across the ring and gave Joe another close-to-the-belly handshake. If Jacobs had had time to elaborate on his charge—as it was he apologized almost as quickly as he hurled his accusation—he would have found great significance in the strange procedure on the part of Louis' seconds and yelled that Black was really relieving Joe of the damaging evidence.

The big flaw in Jacobs' argument was that Mead put the now legendary "gimmick" in Louis' right paw. But the pictures show that it was a left hook—a pip of a punch—that started Maxie on his sodden way.

'Gift Runs' Spell Nat Defeat in 12th, 4 to 3

Tribe Scores On Infielders' Spotty Play

Alex Loses in Relief Role; Chase Misses Chance to Win Game In 9th With Two Out

By Shirley Povich.

One pitch distant from victory in the ninth inning, the Nats lost their grip on a 2-1 ball game at that point and three innings later were slapped down with finality by the Cleveland Indians. The score was 4 to 3, the Indians breaking a 2-2 tie in the twelfth with a pair of gift runs.

Ken Chase had the ball game in his possession in the ninth inning, with two Indians out, and two strikes on Ben Chapman. Whereupon he pitched a centerfield double to Chapman and the tying run scored. In the tenth inning, Alex Alexandra took charge for the Nats. He pitched hitless ball for two innings, and then came the denouement.

The Venezuelan literally gave the ball game back to the Indians, with the co-operation of Taft Wright, who did not make an important catch in right field with two out and the winning run on base. It all began when Alex walked Campbell to start the inning. Chapman's sacrifice moved Campbell to second and then the injuns began to play in luck.

Pitcher Harry Eisenstat, batting in fourth place as the outgrowth of some tenth-inning strategy by Manager Vitt, rolled a feeble grounder toward the pitcher's box, and Alex for no reason at all started to make a play at third base. Finding that bag uncovered, he pulled Prichard off first with a throw to that base, and the upshot was a cheap hit for Eisenstat that moved Campbell to third base with one out.

Turning his attention to Hal Trosky, Alex forced that slugger to pop up to Bloodworth for the second out, and then he pitched to Keltner. A short fly to rightfield bounced off Keltner's bat and Wright pursued it with all the speed of a rheumatic snail. It dropped at his feet for a hit, and Campbell

Macks Shut Out By Detroit, 5-0, In Night Game

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 20.—Tommy Bridges pitched Detroit to a shutout victory over the Athletics tonight in the first floodlight game for the Tigers. Earl Averill's homer with one on contributed to the 5-0 score.

Bridges allowed the Mackmen four scattered hits until the last of the ninth when it looked as if the A's might make good with Earl Brucker's double and Eric Tipton's single.

Hole-in-One Grind Under Floodlights After 1,350 Shots

Michigan City, Ind., June 20 (INS). Harry Gonder resumed his quest for a hole-in-one under floodlights tonight after taking time out at 10 p. m. for a shower.

The 25-year-old professional at the Beverly Shores Country Club who is seeking to prove his contention that anybody can shoot a hole-in-one if he shoots often enough, had hit 1,350 shots off the tenth tee when he retired for his shower.

Just before he paused, he hit the pin and the ball dropped 2 inches from the cup.

Gonder's marathon resulted from a hole-in-one made on the tenth by William Voltz, a club member. Gonder publicly stated that if "a 100 shooter can make a hole-in-one anybody can. "Voltz thought differently, and offered to bet the pro $25 he couldn't do it. Gonder accepted the wager and the marathon was on.

Columbia Crew Captain Rowed With Broken Nose

New York, June 20 (AP).—Henry Remmer, of Oakdale, N. Y., captain and No. 4 oar of the Columbia varsity crew which finished last in the Poughkeepsie Regatta Saturday, rowed the 4-mile race with a broken nose and a badly gashed forehead. The injury was not generally known until today, when he went to the Columbia Medical Center for treatment.

Remmer was hurt Saturday morning when a flagpole on the Columbia boathouse was snapped off by a brisk wind and the jagged end struck Remmer's face. He was

D. C. Hope Has Trouble With Lefty

Italian Dempsey Batters Frank Bruno For Bloody Decision In Semifinal Battle

Making his first appearance before the home town fans since last summer, Georgie Abrams, Washington's hope for a middleweight champion, thumped out a slow ten-round decision over Lou Brouillard, former middleweight and welterweight champion, last night at Griffith Stadium.

It was a hollow victory for Abrams, however, for he could never get going against the cagey Brouillard, who constantly butted, pushed and waltzed with the Washington fighter.

Abrams, facing a southpaw boxer for the first time, showed occasional bursts of the ring ability that won him acclaim in Madison Square Garden recently. But these occasions were too rare to suit Washington's blood-thirsty fans.

Georgie Opens Up

After two rounds of preliminary skirmishing, Georgie opened up in the third round and planted two hard rights on Lou's jaw that made him back away momentarily. He came charging back in, however, to hang on and forced the 21-year-old local boy to do all the work the remainder of the fight.

The fans bellowed disapproval in all its varieties. Boos greeted the end of each round as Abrams strove to untangle himself from Brouillard's hit-and-hang-on tactics.

The squatty French-Canadian did change his tactics in the fourth round and made it unpleasant for Abrams with a looping left that traveled in three-quarter time to the latter's jaw. Lou followed up with a left to the midsection that swung Abrams into the ropes, but the inevitable clinch followed and no one appeared hurt.

Buckley Protests

At the end of the fourth, Johnny Buckley, Brouillard's pudgy manager, one-time manager of Jack Sharkey, entered a violent protest at Referee Ray Bowen's method of handling the fight.

"How about letting them fight in those clinches in there," Buckley pleaded. "You're breaking them apart too quick."

Bowen ignored this by warning Buckley to stay back of his boy's corner.

Although Brouillard draped his weight over Abrams the greater part of the fight and tied up his arms in more knots in the ten rounds than a tenderfoot Boy Scout could think up in ten days, Georgie appeared fresh and eager at the end of the bout. The ageing Brouillard, now 28, however, was a tired man. Buckley said he has been "off his feed" for the past two days.

The judges' decision for Abrams was unanimous. The Post sheet called the first, fourth and seventh rounds even and gave the rest to Abrams. Georgie weighted 160¼, Brouillard 157½.

Far below Promoter Joe Turner's hopes, 1,678 persons paid $2,222.32 to see the home-town boy's bid for middleweight fame. Turner had expected 5,000 persons to turn out to welcome Abrams back to Washington.

In a bloody 6-round semifinal, Italian Jack Dempsey, Brouillard's

Dean Hints Dissension Among Cubs

One-Third of Club, Says Dizzy, Pulling In Wrong Direction

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 20.—Dizzy Dean, right-handed pitcher and left-handed diplomat, today unspiked rumors of dissension in the ranks of Chicago's faltering National League baseball team, rumors that have been consistently spiked by club officials.

Guest of honor at an Association of Commerce luncheon, Dean bluntly stated:

"You businessmen may think you have worries, but the Chicago Cubs are having real worries these days. The reason we aren't on top is that we're not pulling together.

"We're doing the best we can—that is, two-thirds of us are. But we won't get anywhere until the other one-third comes along with us and starts playing baseball."

Bombarded with questions, Dizzy refused to expand on his remarks, stating:

"I probably talked too much already."

However, his remarks were regarded by some only a verification of constant reports that a number of Cubs' "big shots" have been "laying down" on Manager Gabby Hartnett, and of rumors of constant quarreling and bickering in the clubhouse.

Trainer Suspended In Horse 'Stimulation'

Pelleteri and Groom Indefinitely Barred in New York After Belmont

Officials Discover 'Doping' of Sun Plume

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 20.—The New York State Racing Commission today suspended Trainer Anthony Pelleteri indefinitely "in connection with the stimulation of the horse Sun Plume" at Belmont Park, June 5.

The commission's statement also announced indefinite suspension of Pat McCarthy, groom for Sun Plume, which is owned by the Millsdale Stable, and which won the first race by two lengths at Belmont June 5. Pat Dwyer, Pelleteri's foreman, was "reprimanded for carelessness," the commission announcement said.

The commission made its announcement after an investigation, findings of which were discussed at a meeting today. "The investigation will continue," the announcement said.

A complete checkup of Sun Plume during the examination period showed the horse to be normal in temperature, heart, pulse, respiration, eyes, nose and general physical condition.

Under these conditions, the stimulation necessarily occurred after the physical examination. The foreman, Pat Dwyer, who signed the examination slip, and Pat McCarthy, the groom, who was said to have been at lunch when the examination was made, are charged with negligence in failing to properly protect Sun Plume prior to the horse's race. Pelleteri, as trainer, must share in the responsibility. McCarthy, who was in charge of the colt for the entire morning is held directly responsible.

This is the first time Pelleteri ever has been under question.

Parimutuel Betting Approved by N. J. Voters at Polls

Newark, N. J., June 21 (Wednesday) (AP).—New Jersey voters approved today legalization of parimutuel betting on horse races.

It was the first time since 1897, when an anti-gambling ban was written into the State constitution as a result of horse race scandals of the '90's, that gambling in any form became legal in the State.

With only 371 of the State's 3,601 districts missing, the vote was 432,412 for the amendment to 250,248 against it.

The result was a victory for Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City. State Democratic leader, who had campaigned vigorously for adoption of the constitutional amendment, opposing the Rev. Lester H. Clee, Newark Presbyterian clergyman, who directed the campaign against it.

Pearson Holds Sox As Champs Crack Out Nineteen Hits

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 20.—The New York Yankees' dominance over the Chicago White Sox was maintained today on a 19-hit blast that carried the champions to a 13-3 victory. The Sox have been able to check the Yanks but once all season.

Today the Bronx Bombers teed off on three Chicago pitchers, Johnny Knott, Vic Frasier and Ed Smith and made their most vicious bid in the seventh inning when they bagged eight hits after two were out to score seven runs.

Monte Pearson, after a shaky start, collected his sixth victory of the season, limiting the Sox to ten hits which he kept scattered.

Redskins Sign Abdulla, Akron's Star Fullback

A fullback whose college backers insist has "never been known to fumble"—Al Abdulla, Akron University senior—has been signed by the Washington Redskins for the 1939 season.

Otherwise known as "Abba Daba," or the "Syrian Buckeroo," Abdulla was recommended to the Redskins by James W. Aiken, head coach at the Ohio institution, Jack Espy, general manager of the Skins, said.

Abdulla, who was graduated this month from Akron University, was described as the former "all-school-boy fullback of Ohio." He was given this title in 1934 when he led the Canton, Ohio, McKinley High School eleven to a State championship. He has played three years at Akron and last year averaged 5 yards on each run. He scored Akron's only touchdown last fall against Carnegie Tech.

Four Seeded Players Reach Quarter-Finals of Junior Play

Bill Turner Extended by Frank Martin

Second-Seeded Star Wins 4–6, 6–4, 8–6; Doyle Royal Beats Bobby Bensinger.

Without a single upset to disturb their peaceful procession, favorites yesterday marched into the quarter-final round of the Junior Davis Cup tennis tournament at Army-Navy Country Club.

Though there were no form reversals, several matches in which the favorites were extended and carried in a third set provided plenty of excitement. Closest call of the day was had by second-seeded Billy Turner who, in his first match after an opening round bye, came from behind at two crucial turns to defeat Frank Martin, 4—6, 6—4, 8—6. He trailed 5—4 in the second set and 6—3 in the third.

This was probably the best match of an afternoon of stellar and closely-contested play. In another torrid three-set affair Doyle Royal, a "dark horse" entry of the Edgemoor Club, outclassed Bobby Bensinger, District boys' champion, 6—4, 2—6, 7—5.

Henry Watts also went through quite a tussle before turning back Slater Clarke, 5—7, 6—2, 9—7.

Maurice Cowan, diminutive No. 1 player of the St. Alban's team, won two matches. He defeated Dick Mayfield in the first round, 6—0, 6—2, and then returned to the courts to beat Dave Smith, 6—1, 6—3.

Quarter-final matches this afternoon should produce at least one upset for the four seeded stars, for each meets a worthy foe.

FIRST ROUND—Maurice Cowan defeated Richard Mayfield, 6—0, 6—2; Dick Smith defeated Hal Landsman by default.

SECOND ROUND—Billy Turner defeated Frank Martin, 4—6, 6—4, 8—6; Doyle Royal defeated Robert Bensinger, 6—4, 2—6, 7—5; Bill Wickham defeated Jack Martin, 6—0, 6—2; Cowan defeated Dave Smith, 6—1, 6—3; Harry Brinkerhoff defeated Griffin Holland, 6—1, 6—1; Eddie Richardson defeated Hal Titus, 6—3, 6—0; Jack Hoyt defeated Buddy Edwards, 6—1, 6—2; Henry Watts defeated Slater Clarke, 5—7, 6—2, 9—7.

After standing toe to toe and slugging it out for three fast rounds, both boys displayed a little temper and continued fighting at the end of the third until Referee Ray Bowen intervened. The crowd gave them a big hand.

In the first 6-rounder, Billy Bullock, 132, Washington, came off the canvas in the first round to punch his way to an unpopular decision over Billy Carrigan, 135, Baltimore. Bullock bleeding from a cut opened over his right eye in the fourth round by Carrigan, backed constantly away but made every blow count. The fans booed lustily at the decision, however.

Passeau's 5-Hit Performance Trips Bees for 3d Win

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 20.—The Chicago Cubs, with the five-hit pitching of Claude Passeau, defeated the Boston Bees, 3 to 1, today.

The Cubs, in achieving their third straight win, made only six hits off Milburn Shoffner, Johnny Lanning and Fred Frankhouse, but they bunched three safeties in the fourth inning for all of their runs.

Joe's 'Perfect Day' Ruins Pitching Debut Of St. Louis Rookie

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 20.—Joe Vosmik ruined Rookie Right-Hander Harry Kimberlin's first start as a major leaguer today by giving a perfect performance at the plate as the Boston Red Sox defeated St. Louis, 8-1. Vosmik got four for four, including two consecutive triples, scored two runs and drove in three more.

Indians Beat Nats in 12th Inning, 4-3

'Gift Runs' by Wright And Alexandra End Tribe's Uphill Fight

crossed the plate. There was nothing tainted, however, about Hale's sharp single to center that followed, driving in the second run of the inning.

The Nats had the tying and winning runs on third and second base before they accepted defeat in the twelfth. George Case beat out a bunt to open the Nats' counter attack, but Travis immediately forced him and Lewis fled out to Campbell. Taft Wright breathed fire into the rally with a single to left, and then Estalella dropped a looping fly inside the foul line for a two-bagger that scored Travis and moved Wright to third.

It was a free-slugging battle despite the modest 4-3 score, each club collecting 14 hits. For eight innings it was a gripping duel between Ken Chase and Johnny Allen, with Chase holding a 2-1 lead when the game moved into the ninth.

Back in the second inning, Keltner's triple into the center field corner and Grimes' accidental single, achieved when he attempted to duck a pitch, scored a Cleveland run. That was to be their last until the ninth, Chase was in trouble in virtually every inning, but sensational support by Bloodworth and Travis was helping him over the hump.

Bobby Estalella's double tied the score for the Nats in the second inning and they took a 2-1 lead in the third after George Case whisked a double to left center. The first of Buddy Lewis' three hits of the day—a single to right, scored Case.

The Nats muffed a chance to clinch the game in the eighth when Travis beat out an infield hit and Lewis bunted safely with none out. But Wright and Estalella hit into force plays and Bloodworth flied out.

Pinch hitter Jeff Heath, hitless in 16 previous trips tothe plate, started the Indians on their tying rally in the ninth with a single to center, and Bloodworth made a brilliant play in grabbing Hemsley's grounder and tagging Heath on the baselines.

Middle Atlantic Softball Tourney To Begin Tonight

Some idea of the comparative strength of local softball teams, particularly the rampaging Tru-Blu ten, will be furnished starting tonight when the Middle Atlantic softball tournament begins at Bailston ball yard in Arlington, Va. Several of the strongest clubs from this section will be entered, including Overnight Transportation, of Baltimore, and Trenton Democratic Club, of the same city.

Hostilities get under way tonight promptly at 8 o'clock, with a meeting between Overnight, 1938 titlist of Maryland, and one of the best local clubs, Maritime Commission.

Dave Johnsen In Semifinals Of Net Play

G. W. Netman Is Only Local Star Remaining In Collegiate Trials

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., June 20.—Three of the four seeded players, Russell L. Bobbitt, Georgia Tech; George Pero, Miami, and Dave Johnson, George Washington, passed undefeated through the first two rounds of the qualifying matches today for the National Collegiate Championships, and will enter the semifinals tomorrow afternoon.

Another selected player, Alex Guerry, of Sewanee, dropped a second-round match to Bill Hardie, another Miami player, who played some of the best tennis of the afternoon, and with George Pero, seded as No. 2, should make a strong bid for qualification in the doubles.

Dave Johnson, George Washington's sole representative, was awarded a match by default today from Meyer Golfand, of Georgetown, and then gave a decisive defeat to Russell Blair, the Navy's leading player, 6—3, 6—4 and 6—2.

First round—Dave Johnsen (George Washington) won by default from Meyer Golfand (Georgetown). Russell Blair (Navy) won by default from Joe Mahoney (Virginia). George Pero defeated Nathan Askin (Maryland), 3—6, 6—0, 6—2; Bill Hardie (Miami) defeated Bob Laney (Navy), 6—1, 6—2; Alex Guerry (Sewanee) won by default from Joe Albertus (Tulane). Bill Hardie (Miami) defeated George Dunkins (Virginia), 8—6, 6—4; Russell Bobbitt (Georgia Tech) defeated John O'Malley (Navy), 6—3, 6—4; George Pero (Miami) defeated Charley Channing (Virginia), 6—2, 7—5.

Second round—Dave Johnsen (George Washington) defeated Russell Blair (Navy), 6—3, 6—4, 6—2; Bill Hardie (Miami) defeated Alex Guerry (Sewanee), 6—2, 6—1, 6—4; Alex Bobbitt (Georgia Tech) defeated Allie Rittenberry (Maryland), 6—3, 6—2, 6—1; George Pero (Miami) defeated Bob Kerdasha (Presbyterian), 6—4, 7—5, 6—1.

D. G. S. Wins First Start in League

A four-run rally in the sixth inning of a seven-inning game saved D. G. S. nine from a beating in its first start in the Departmental League yesterday on the Ellipse. Having joined the league only recently to replace the withdrawn Bureau of Engraving club, D. G. S. defeated Maritime Commission by a close 5-to-3 count.

Bruce and Bowers hurled for the winners, giving up seven hits between them, while all but two of the ten Grocerymen in the line-up hit safely. Mitchell's triple was the only extra-base clout of the day.

Bureau Girls Score

Mary Chaconas gave her Bureau of Engraving girls softball teammates an 11-to-3 victory yesterday when she pitched two-hit ball against Veterans Administration on the Lincoln Memorial lot. Mary's cause was aided by the timely slugging of Teddy Wammack and "Sandy" Kearnan. The first hit a triple with two on, and the second another triple with one mate aboard.

U. S. Riflemen Leave For Match in England

Fifteen men who will sail for England today to "shoot it out" with the British came to Washington yesterday and solemnly pledged themselves to show the Britons a thing or two in handling a rifle.

Their main purpose just now is to bring the Gen. John J. Pershing small-bore rifle trophy to America—something they have failed to do on two previous tries. In fact, the trophy has never graced American soil.

Representing the cream of the Nation's riflemen, the Pershing Trophy team was honored last night at the Mayflower Hotel in a final testimonial dinner by the National Rifle Association and reminded to follow the example set by America's polo team.

Waller Presides

Col. L. W. Waller, of Philadelphia, U. S. M. C. Reserve, president of the association, presided at the dinner and served as main reminder to the riflemen.

The team members were reminded that in addition to firing rifles they will be serving also as "good-will ambassadors" between the two English-speaking nations.

Earlier in the day they had a taste of this as they were received at the State Department and the British Embassy after assembling in Washington from all parts of the Nation.

D. C. Man On Team.

The team—ten firing members, two alternates and three officials—was selected by the Rifle Association, which has headquarters here, on the basis of scores fired over a year of open competition throughout the United States.

Given by Gen. Pershing in 1931, the trophy was won that year by the British team and retained by them in 1937—both times by the narrow margin of two points.

The 1939 team—including one Washingtonian, Ralph McGarity, of 1332 Quincy place northwest—has been picked by experts to win the trophy for America for the first time, Col. Waller said.

The team will sail for Bisley, England on the U. S. liner Roosevelt, and the meet will be held July 9. If the Americans win, a return match will be held in the United States in 1940.

Members of the team are Dr. Russell Gardner, of Troy, Ohio, captain; J. C. Lippencott, jr., of Elizabeth, N. J., coach; McGarity, adjutant; H. D. Allyn, of Springfield, Mass.; R. D. Berkheiser, of Hopewell

Mrs. Myron Davy's Birdie on 21st Hole Defeats Mrs. Stokes

Five of Eight Choices Win Women's Golf

Mrs. Simon Beats Mrs. Hill in Upset Marion Brown Scores Another Easy Victory

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Three great shots on the third extra hole by Mrs. Myron Davy, netting a birdie and a 21-hole triumph over Mrs. Walter Stokes, featured the first round play in the District Women's Championship yesterday at Columbia, with five of the eight favored players advancing to the quarter-finals.

Among the mild upsets was Mrs. H. J. Simon's last hole triumph over Mrs. Bishop Hill; Mrs. Ora Emge's 1-up victory over Mrs. Charlotte Stern and Mrs. Hume Peabody's decision over Louise Claytor, in extra holes.

While the above four results were decided on the final or extra holes, the others were not even close. Champion and medalist Marion Brown won 8 and 6 over Mrs. K. S. Giles, while former titleholder, Mrs. Betty Meckley, trounced the host club champion, Mrs. H. M. Brundage, 7 and 6. Mrs. Leo Walper and Mrs. L. G. Pray were on the right side of 7 and 5 margins.

Evens Match on 14th

The Stokes-Davy match was billed as the outstanding first round encounter and proved to be just that. They took turns winning the first seven holes, halved the eighth and rounded the half-way mark all even. Mrs. Davy started back with a pair of sixes to go 2 down, but evened the match on the fourteenth. She went 1 up on the fifteenth, but lost the next to a deuce and they halved the next two in fives for extra holes.

The two evenly matched players continued their stroke-for-stroke play on the nineteenth and twentieth, Mrs. Stokes missing a 5-foot putt for a deuce on the latter, but Mrs. Davy ended the marathon on the twenty-first with a fine drive, a spoon, to within 15 feet of the pin and dropped the putt for a birdie and victory.

Mrs. Peabody Wins

Mrs. Peabody won the other long-distance match over Miss Claytor by winning the eighth and nineteenth with fives. The loser missed three putts of less than a foot during the match that proved costly.

Miss Brown, a medalist Monday and now a heavy favorite, again played the best golf of the day. She was out in 40 and started back 4-5-5, while Mrs. Meckley was out in 40 and back in 5-5-5 for her victory. Mrs. Walper also turned in 40 against Mrs. George Goetzmann, Congressional, while Mrs. Pray was out in 42 against Mrs. Harvey Cooper.

The Stokes-Davy match was not the longest of the day, Mrs. J. F. Gross of the host club winning over Mrs. F. D. Letts, Chevy Chase, in the second flight, on the 21st.

A Championship Twosome—Western Open and District

Helen Dettweiler Sees Women's Play

The 1938 runner-up in the District women's championship, and also a former titleholder, was in a spectator's role yesterday at Columbia—now better known as the new Women's Western Open champion, and the outstanding golf professional of her sex today. The name, Helen Dettweiler.

Mrs. Opal Hill, Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb and Mrs. Babe Didrickson Zaharias, the other well-known women pros, were better known as amateurs than Washington's new star, but they don't own a pro title between them as important as the Western crown.

The most amazing part of Helen's victory in the St. Louis tournament was that in her five matches, four against outstanding opponents, she was never down. That's a great way to win, get ahead on the first hole—and stay there.

The former holder of the District, Maryland and Middle Atlantic titles, as well as many of the smaller local tourneys and major southern affairs, defeated a host city entrant in the first round, and then romped through the '38 finalist; Helen Hoffman; the two young stars, Shirley Anne Johnson and Jeanne Cline, and Beatrice Barrett in the finals. She was never over 81 after the qualifying round, and against Miss Johnson had par for a 71 when the match ended.

Miss Dettweiler started her pro career several weeks ago, with a tour of the plant of her new employers in Chicago. She followed that with a daily round of exhibitions throughout the Midwest playing once with Wilfred Wehrle, the Western Amateur champion. Her program usually included a round in the morning with the club pro and two or three members of the club. Then a luncheon and a shot-making exhibition in the afternoon, answering questions. A talk on golf concluded a busy day.

Helen will follow much of the same procedure in this vicinity for two or three weeks, and then make a northern trip. She will be on hand at Friday's prize presentation in the District championship.

The 24-year-old District miss will play in the White Face Invitation July 24-29 in Lake Placid, N. Y.; will take in the Nationals as a spectator and then play the winter tournament circuit with her fellow pros and the best amateurs.

Memphis Team Beats Local Softballers

Though its starting pitcher, Sug Dondiville, was removed from the game in the third inning after being struck by one of Abe Rosenfeld's fast pitches, the Woco Pep team, of Memphis, Tenn., won its clash with the powerful Tru Blue ten last night at Boys Republic Stadium, 2 to 0. Tony Ferrari, another star of the southern regional champions, took over and held the locals to a scattered three hits in the next five innings. He struck out 15 and gave up no bases on balls.

Rosenfeld was only slightly less effective than the Woco hurlers. He contributed 11 strikeouts and held the opposition scoreless for six frames.

Brewers Beat 7-Up Nine, 8-2; Tie for Lead

Bob Knight's Homer, Two Aboard, Clinches Industrial Contest

With Walter James pitching six-hit ball and Dick Knight and George Knepley contributing extra-base hits, the Heurich Brewers brought themselves into a tie for first place in the Industrial Baseball League yesterday, trouncing 7-Up A. C., 8 to 2, on the West Ellipse.

Though the Beermen grabbed the lead in the initial frame and held on for three innings, 7-Up made a strong bid for the game in the fourth by tying the count at 2-2. Knight's homer in the fifth, however, broke the deadlock and put Heurich in a lead it never lost. Three runs were scored then, two on Knight's knock and another on Pepco Barry's single.

Just to make things certain, the Brewers added three more tallies in the seventh, all resulting from two singles, a walk and an error and sacrifice. Heurich could muster only nine safeties, but it profited on four 7-Up errors.

Maryland State Entries Close

Noon today is the closing time for entries to the Maryland State Amateur championship, that starts Friday at the Rolling Road course in Catonsville. Emmet Gary, secretary of the State Golf Association, is accepting the names at 16 McClellan place, Baltimore. Post entries will be taxed an additional $2, to the regulation $3 fee.

The tournament continues with match play Saturday and Sunday. Roger Peacock, newly crowned Middle Atlantic champion, will head a District delegation of between 25 and 50 players after the title.

3 Americans Win At London Net

London, June 20 (U.P.).—Three Americans survived today's play in the London grass court tennis championships before rain late in the afternoon caused the rest of the schedule to be postponed until tomorrow.

Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., gained the third round with an 8—6, 10—8, victory over Mrs. Sylvia Henrotin, of France. Two other Americans advanced by default. They were Gene Smith, who gained the second round of the men's singles, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, who gained the third round of the women's singles.

On Fishing

We have always believed quail were best raised on wire. Probably because the Oak Hill Farms, near Richmond, each year raise between 10,000 and 14,000 in that manner, and have been rated as one of the most successful hatcheries in the country. Bethesda-Chevy Chase Ikes, raising birds for release, have also found wire flooring will produce more and healthier birds.

ACKERMAN

So it is extremely interesting to find that members of the Prince Georges Game and Fish Conservation Association are not only using the old method of bantam hens on the ground, but are meeting with real success in its use. Last year they raised nearly 500 in a like manner. At present Carl Frey, of Hyattsville, has 74 young quail out and nearly 100 more hatching. Many other members have eggs setting.

They request farmers to use flushing poles in cutting hay to save the nests. Any that are destroyed are picked up and the eggs reset under bantams. Certainly any such organization of sportsmen will never see the Bob White quail die out in their area. The next meeting of the association, which boasts of a membership of nearly half a thousand, will be at Oxon Hill schoolhouse next Tuesday night. If you are interested in their work, or just want to meet a bunch of grand fellows, by all means go out.

Tonight is the regular meeting of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of the Izaak Walton League. It will be held as usual in the National Capital Field Trial clubhouse on Bradley boulevard.

Next Saturday, June 24, at 3 p. m., on the Joe Cox farm, will be held the Washington Chapter's annual chowder party and barbecue. If you remember, it was at this gathering last year that plans were laid for the correction of pollution in the Potomac watershed. Who can say what this year will bring forth. Much of the fun and talks will be broadcast. Fred Orsinger will have, more than likely, a new trick or two to add to the general levity. But go on out and see for yourself. Forest Glan bus to the end of the line, or drive out Georgia avenue to Montgomery Hills and follow the signs. Tickets are a buck at any sport store.

Starting Thursday, June 22, and running through Saturday, the Southern Fly Casting Tournament at Banner Elk, N. C., that in addition to the regular events usually found in tournament casting, boasts of an actual event on real trout. They must be caught in Wildcat Lake or Elk River.

Many local sportsmen know J. Hammond Brown as the co-instigator of the week-end get-togethers to better acquaint Marylanders with the beauty and natural resources of their State, which this week-end has Solomons Island as the focal point.

Baltimoreans know him for his fishing column, "Hook, Line and Sinker." We know him for a grand fellow and a lucky fisherman. There just can't help being good fishing when he is around, and he seldom sticks to the orthodox methods and means. A week ago he wouldn't fish from the Hilda II, Crawford Savage's marlin boat at Ocean City, preferring, instead, to go with young Billy Crawford in his 16-foot skiff, to try out some new Metalure "Bugeyes" on the blues and mackerel. Crawford towed them off some 12 or 14 miles before turning them loose on a school of blues, that really went for the new featherlures. It was nip and tuck for the next four hours. While one held the nose of the skiff up to the wind to keep her from filling, the other hauled fish — turn and turn. "Ham" lost a new hat and was soaked through and through, but happy withal, for when the Hilda II picked them up the pair of them were knee-deep in four-pound bluefish.

These new Metalure "Bugeye" feathers seem to be a must in the tackle box, for bluefish and mackerel are not the only fish hitting them. West River boats trolling for stripers in Eastern Bay have been taking not only big fish, but big catches of them. Be sure you have the right lure by getting it off the display card. There are as many kinds of feathers on the market now as there are fish in the bay.

Expert Will Fish To Find Virginia's Deep Sea Waters

Employed by the Deep Sea Fishing Association of Virginia, Cass will fish off shore from Virginia Beach and the Eastern Shore until late August or early September. Members of the association expect him to be of valuable aid in determining the areas where fishermen can expect to catch white marlin, dolphin and perhaps school tuna and horse mackerel.

Cass is expected to base his boat at Little Creek. He will be accompanied on his trips outside by members of the association and invited guests.

Pays $14.60; Lady Buck Is Second

Cats Cradle Third; Ade Easily Wins Eighth, Bringing Backers $35.40

By Walter Haight.

Charles Town, West Va., June 20. Winning his fourth straight race, H. O. Witt's Tavern scored in a photo finish in today's features. The 4-year-old gelding, sharing top weight in the sprint of four and a half furlongs, won by a good head and brought his backers a surprising 14.60 mutuel. Jockey Hernandez did the knocking on the son of Laurano and turned in an excellent job. He outrode Apprentice R. Bernhardt in the stretch after Lady Buck had forged to the front. Cats Cradle, weary from running with the ultimate winner, was third. The race was run over a muddy, holding track in 0:51 4-5.

Tavern broke none too well and had to be hustled to get to the front. Cats Cradle, off well, gave Tavern a tussle before the latter took a definite lead. Lady Buck, always close up, came to the outside of the leader approaching the stretch and moved up to take command. Hernandez then went to the whip and Tavern rallied to go on to victory.

The two rivals were lapped on each other in the stretch run and Bernhardt came back to register a claim of foul. After listening to his story, the officials put their stamp of approval and the result stood as run.

Trainer R. F. Cook registered another victory in the fifth race when he saddled Clymene and the mare paid a $21.40 mutuel. Vendor's Lien was second and Trixie Lass was third. Jockey Root, unable to win with Counora in a previous race, made no mistakes with the 5-year-old mare.

Kissin Kid and Miss Dolly Kay teamed to produce a $24.20 mutuel in the daily double. Both scored in good fashion.

The track was deep in mud and times were slow for all the events.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KISSIN KID, $10.80, $5.40, $3.40; HAPPY MARLENE, $5.60, $3.40; MISS GREEN, $2.80.

KISSIN KID, in thick of contention from start, took command when MASKED VISITOR went wide and held HAPPY MARLENE safe in closing stages. HAPPY MARLENE, off in middle of pack, had to be taken up entering stretch while improving position and weakened right at end. MISS GREEN fell before start, was off poorly and closed full of run. LUCIE MOWLEE went evenly from sluggish beginning. MASKED VISITOR got to front and ran out. COTONEASTER could not keep up.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:28½. Off 3:33. Winner, E. Nelson's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS DOLLY KAY, $6.60, $3.40, $2.60; HANDLEY, $6.00, $3.60; KENNER, $3.20.

MISS DOLLY KAY, rushed to contention going to backstretch, went around leaders to get to front and was driven out entering stretch. HANDLEY was hard ridden to get to front going to first turn and held on willingly, but was no match for winner. KENNER was hard ridden and failed to stay after forcing early pace. GEE SHARP went evenly. PRESUMPTION was off poorly. DILWIN had a rough trip.

Daily Double, Kissin Kid and Miss Dolly Kay, Paid $24.20.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds Start poor. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:56½. Off 4:00. Winner, T. W. Willingham's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAIL BY, $21.80, $8.20, $5.20; LYDE, $4.00, $3.20; PARKING TICKET, $3.40.

SAIL BY, steadied along on outside of PARKING TICKET to stretch, responded willingly when placed to intermittent punishment and drew clear at end. LYDE collided with LACEY MISS at first turn to be forced back and came to inside to close full of run. PARKING TICKET set good pace and faltered badly. LACEY MISS recovered after bumping and closed gamely. COUNORA was out off sharply when PARKING TICKET came out directly after break and was held safe. HERLERO had little chance with the start.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:25. Off 4:26. Winner, G. P. Cook's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLYMENE, $21.40, $9.40, $5.40; VENDOR'S LIEN, $7.20, $4.60; TRIXIE LASS, $3.40.

CLYMENE, steadied along while in close quarters at first turn, went to front boldly when placed to drive and held way thereafter under hard handling. VENDOR'S LIEN took command early and continued gamely when caught. TRIXIE LASS was hard ridden and had no excuses. BEAUFAST was held safe. CHESSIE had early speed and quit badly.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:51. Off 4:54. Winner, H. O. Witt's br. g. (4), by Laurano—Sucky. Trained by W. T. Allen. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:51 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAVERN, $14.60, $5.80, $4.00; LADY BUCK, $4.20, $3.20; CAT'S CRADLE, $3.20.

TAVERN, in thick of contention from start, shook off CAT'S CRADLE and was headed by LADY BUCK in early stretch, but responded to punishment to be up in final strides. LADY BUCK was forwardly placed from start, got to front, but weakened at end. Bernhardt's claim of foul was not allowed. CAT'S CRADLE, off slightly, forced early pace and tired. MARGIE WRACK was in close quarters entering stretch. NOB could not keep up. CHARMING BOY was pulled up when in close quarters at turn.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:18. Off 5:21. Winner, Mrs. J. A. Arthur's ch. m. At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 20.

Dear Al:

Members of the Washington Golf and Country Club will stage their annual outing to be featured by an attack on the mutuel machines here tomorrow afternoon. Henry Rodier, Dorie Gruver and the other boys will breakfast at the club, motor to Leesburg for a battle on the golf links and then hustle to the track in time for luncheon and a tussle with the horses. The track has named the day's feature the Washington Golf and Country Club Handicap, in honor of the visitors. Jockey Al Gaither was an arrival from Fairmont Park. He will take in the Maryland meetings following the close of this session July 8. J. Yancy Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, was an arrival from Suffolk Downs. I. K. Mourar shipped five horses from Wheeling to Hagerstown. Mourar will van here on days he gets a chance to race. Fickle Mood is the latest addition to the stewards' list. Sammay Palumbo stands an excellent chance of riding 50 winners before the meeting ends. When today's sports started Palumbo had been aboard 36 winners. The apprentice W. Vassar is confined to the Charles Town Hospital with an injured knee. Jockey Herbie Lauch and Agent Joe Sherry departed for Delaware Park. Trainer M. C. Keefe reports that Miss Selma wrenched her ankle during the running of yesterday's race.

BILL.

First race—Five-o-Four turned in a good race here and seems capable of graduating from the maiden ranks in this field. Skye Lassie has had chances, but promises to be prominent with these. Shuchor has had poor racing luck and is not outclassed.

Second race—Landsman deserves another chance. Likes this route and the off track will help. Waugh Scout's last was impressive. Worthowning and Fred Alva would be factors if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—Happy Host is the class of this field. Breaks from an outside post position and may win despite the apprentice rider. Royal Vail is far down the list, but would be a keen contender if in action. Rocky Mount belongs with these.

Fourth race—Schley Buck turned in a fine race last out and should take down the chief award in this field. Prairie Man won last out and is a threat. Sun Belle will like the track.

Fifth race—Crusand appears to be the solid horse in this field and may make every post a winning one. Kitty's Rival is fit as hands make horses and will be in the thick of contention. Aperire failed at a longer route, but has plenty of speed.

Sixth race—Happy Road seems well placed in this company and I understand Palumbo will ride. Spotless and Jinneal to fill out the money bracket. Flashing Steel may be better than generally rated.

Seventh race—Sea Finn is ready and favors this route. May surprise by knocking off Never Idle. The latter scored at a mile and a quarter last out. Canimar can better that last.

Eighth race—Channing is a hard-knocking horse favored by the inside position and I look for a set of brackets. Minna will be at home in the going. Chatterdoo improves on off tracks and will be right there.

Substitute race—If this race is used I'll take Small Chance, Counter March and Justa Canter.

Best bet—Happy Road.

Federal Deficit A Billion Less Than Expected

May Expenditures Exceed Receipts by $348,000,000

New York, June 20.—The Federal Government continued to spend money at a high rate in May and, as usual, ended the month with a large deficit, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. Expenditures in May exceeded ordinary receipts by $348,000,000. Debt retirement and trust account receipts failed to modify this showing to any considerable extent. After making allowances for these two factors, there was still a deficit of $338,000,000.

Although the Government had a large balance in the Treasury at the beginning of May, it withdrew only $119,000,000 during the month to meet the deficit. Consequently, the debt was further increased by $219,000,000 and it reached a new high record total of $40,282,000.

During the first 11 months of the current fiscal year, which began with last July, the Government's deficit, after making allowance for debt retirement and trust account receipts, amounted to $2,409,000,000. In addition to this deficit, the Government built up its Treasury balance by $708,000,000. As a result the debt showed an increase of $3,117,000,000 during the first 11 months. This increase was three times as great as the increase in the debt during the corresponding period last year.

Spending Under Estimate

The actual deficit during the first 11 months, however, was considerably smaller than that anticipated in the budget made public last January. The budget indicated that the deficit during the first 11 months would amount o $3,679,000,000 as compared with the actual deficit of $2,409,000,000. The fact that the deficit was smaller than anticipated was due partly to the fact that expenditures did not come up to anticipations. It was also due to the fact that trust account receipts amounted to $795,000,000, which was sharply in contrast to expected expenditures of $38,000,000.

The increase in the debt during the first 11 months, however, was not much smaller than the increase indicated in the budget. This was due to the fact that the Government added to the Treasury balance, whereas the budget provided for a reduction in the Treasury balance.

Trading Reopened In Reichsbank Shares

Berlin, June 20 (AP).—Trading of Reichsbank shares on the Berlin boerse opened again today after reorganization of the institution as a purely national bank. The shares opened today at 184½ per cent of par and closed at 184⅞. The previous close was 178½.

With the reorganization of the Reichsbank as announced last Thursday by its president, Economics Minister Walther Funk, foreigners are to be recompensed 100 per cent for surrender of Reichsbank shares. It was estimated foreigners hold 35,000,000 to 40,000,000 marks nominally ($14,000,000 to $16,000,000) of the total of 150,000,000 marks ($60,000,000) of shares.

Martin A. Cook Celebrates His Silver Jubilee

Yesterday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of service for Martin A. Cook, secretary of the Enterprise Building Association. He has seen the assets of the Eenterprise increase from less than $500,000 to more than $1,600,000. He is a graduate of Georgetown University Law School, a member of the District of Columbia & Loan League.

D. C. Building & Loan League

A full attendance of the executive council, District of Columbia Building & Loan League, was reported at the regular monthly luncheon held at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday. It was decided to hold the June meeting of the entire membership next Tuesday at the same place. President Arthur G. Bishop informed the council that league members would swell the number of guests at the testimonial dinner to be given Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner, at the Mayflower on June 28.

Am. Sec. & Trust Co.

The American Security and Trust Co. has elected Louis L. Bowdler a member of its advisory board of branches and the advisory committee of its Northeast Branch. Mr. Bowdler is a member of the firm Robert Bowdler, long established florists of this city. He is president of the Society of Natives, a past president of the Northeast Business Men's association and a vice president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations.

Business Meetings

The American Businessmen's Club will hold a luncheon meeting today at the Hay-Adams House.

The D. C. Cost Accountants will give a dinner at the same hotel tonight, followed by a meeting.

Cotton Trade Under Heavy Load Economist Says

New York June 20.—"The cotton trade continues to labor under the burden of uncertainties of a gravity and scope such as it never before experienced." Alston H. Garside, economist of the New York Cotton Exchange, said today. "Proposed export subsidies, proposed adjustment payments on cotton sold, the new crop loan rate—these and other pending issues carry the possibility of affecting the price of cotton by cents a pound, and at this writing it is impossible to foresee what the Government will do about them.

"The impossibility of discounting future developments in these matters is necessarily retarding cotton trade activity in numerous directions. Shippers and exporters are being forced to proceed most cautiously with respect to booking forward sales of new crop cotton. Spinners in this country and abroad are discouraged from buying cotton beyond their requirements. Notwithstanding some recent large sales of cloth in the domestic market, it is clear that the uncertainties of the cotton situation have greatly restricted forward business in both domestic and foreign cloth markets.

"Speculative buyers of futures contracts, who in normal times assume the price risks on a large portion of the floating supply of cotton in the world, are very largely keeping to the sidelines, realizing the exceptional difficulty in forming sound judgment on price movements in the face of unforeseeable governmental action."

employment is concerned, by a shorter work week for all employes and the further processing of the steel that is now necessary to meet consumer requirements."

B. & O. Carloadings

Baltimore, June 20.—Baltimore & Ohio carloadings for the week ended June 17 totaled 42,402, an increase of 6,978 cars loaded over the corresponding week of last year. Last week's total also showed a slight increase over the previous week of this year, when total loads were 42,096.

Steel Plants Now in Best Condition Ever

This Favorable Factor Is Offset by Rigidity Of Wages and Taxes

New York, June 20.—The physical plant of the American steel industry is probably in better condition today than ever before, and it is prepared to handle promptly and efficiently any reasonable volume of business that may develop out of a return of more normal business conditions, the Index, published by the New York Trust Co., says today.

"Offsetting this favorable factor, to some extent at least, is the rigidity that has developed in the cost structure of the industry, largely as as a result of the growing tax burden and the more or less fixed wage scale," the Index continues. "Consequently, in times of sub-normal business like the present, downward pressure on steel prices cannot be promptly offset by redurtion in the cost of production, and hence profit margins suffer to an exaggerated extent.

"The facts remain, however, that large shortages in the country's capital equipment have developed over the last ten years, that much depreciation and obsolescence remain to be made good, and that sooner or later this is certain to mean an increased volume of business for the steel industry.

"Even in 1938, when steel production averaged only 40 per cent of capacity, the industry gave employment directly to an average of 443,000 people. In addition 200,000 persons were needed to supply the industry with raw materials, and countless others worked to manufacture and fabricate the steel into finished goods. Representing a capital investment of over $4,000,000,000, the industry turned our products with a value of approximately $1,900,000,000.

New and Better Products

"Remarkable progress has been made during the last 15 years in developing new steel products and improving those previously manufactured. The steel industry has been in the forefront of the movement to modernize its plants, giving practical application to advances in manufacturing methods. Impetus has been given to this tendency by the shift in demand from the heavier to the lighter types of steel products, which necessitated the installation of considerable new equipment. In the five-year period ended 1939, it is estimated that the steel industry will have spent nearly $1,000,000,000 in the construction of plants and the purchase of machinery.

"Contrary to the belief prevailing in some quarters, the introduction of new modern machinery in the steel industry has not resulted in a reduction in the total number of persons employed. While the entire steel industry employed 419,534 wage earners in 1929 to produce 41,000,000 tons of rolled and finished steel products, it employed 512,942 men in 1937, when its production was less than 37,000,000 tons.

"The explanation is that while machinery has eliminated a certain amount of heavy physical labor, thus has been more than offset, as far as

Cotton Futures Slip Lower in Late Selling

New York, June 20 (AP).—A last-minute selling flurry blew the cotton futures market off a steady course today. Closing prices were unchanged to 4 points lower. But traders didn't go out of their way to do much selling or buying. Most preferred to await Washington action on the agricultural appropriation bill, expected to be taken up in the House on Thursday. Trading, consequently, was largely of a trade and professional character.

Offerings for the most part represented hedges in new crop months and a spattering of Southern offerings. At 8½ cents for October, contracts were more plentiful from the South, but still not sufficient to cause serious setbacks. The late selling appeared to be nervous liquidation. Support represented trade fixing of prices and some short covering.

Cottonseed Oil

Heavy liquidation of cottonseed oil futures wiped out early gains today and left the market 7 to 11 points net lower. Continued quiet cash oil demand, slim speculative interest and keen competition between refined oil and cheaper edible fats and lard contributed to the setback, brokers said. Sales totaled 129 lots; July, 6.50 bid; September, 6.66 bid; October, 6.73; December, 6.81; January, 6.84 bid.

Sales of crude oil were made in the valley at 5¾ cents, which was bid at the close. The valley bid 5½ and Texas was 5½ to 5¼ nominal.

Steels, Utilities, Motors Continue Rise Ocean Flight Helps Aviations Tax Relief a Favorable Factor

New York, June 20.—The mild advance in steel shares continued today and with less of the irregularity and on larger volume than in the preceding session. Utilities led in activity and were moderately higher all along the line. Motors also extended their rise while steels and coppers advanced easily although on lighter dealings. Aviations responded to buying based on the success of the transatlantic clipper flights and new reports of expansion in airplane manufacture. A lag in oils and foods may have been accounted for by uncertainties in price structures affecting those industries.

Foreign exchange transactions reflected little if any of the uneasiness abroad over the Anglo-Japanese situation at Tientsin, new indications of Germany's military expansion and lack of progress in the British-Russian negotiations for a mutual defense pact. Bonds were firm in most sections including governments. Wheat staged a mild rally to halt the slide of prices which has been in evidence for more than a week, while cotton eased a trifle. For the first time since the 1932-1933 depression, cocoa prices went under 4 cents.

Investment Demand

The evidences of a cautious but increasing investment demand could be traced to the better feeling over prospects for business relief from the tax measure now before Congress. Hearings on the bill before the Finance Committee of the Senate, it is felt, will see attempts to make it even more favorable for business interests. The final form of this piece of legislation is, of course, conjectural, but most observers do not anticipate much alteration in its provisions. Late in the day it was learned, however, that one large organization recently authorized by the SEC to invest several millions in stocks, had curtailed buying because of the foreign situation.

It is the outlook abroad, incidentally, that is giving traders and more particularly the short-term operators the most worry. In the United States, it is held certain that the politicians will do everything possible to mollify and please business and to encourage optimism in advance of the elections.

Spurt in Armour

A flurry in Armour & Co. stocks provided a mild feature, with the common issue of the Illinois, or parent company, joining the most active 15 for a gain of ⅜, an important rise in such a low-priced stock. Armour prior preferred and Armour of Delaware 7 per cent preferred spurted 5 points or more apiece. The buying was based on an overnight report, later described as "premature" by the company, that a refunding and consolidation program is being considered by the management.

Telephone closed at 163¼, up 1¾, at its best level of the day. It enjoyed a rise of more than 2 points on Monday. Chrysler, Hall Printing, General Motors, U. S. Rubber and Cluett Peabody were others prominent on the upside. Commonwealth & Southern preferred gained more than 3, Union Pacific 2¼ and Johns Manville 2. Hercules Powder and du Pont rose sharply. General Cigar preferred and Eastman Kodak each lost 4 on nominal dealings.

Oil Figures

American Petroleum Institute figures on crude oil production and refined products stocks, released today, disclose no great improvement in the statistical picture from the viewpoint of those in the industry who believe crude supplies and the rate of gasoline manufacture are larger than necessary. Refiners are running about 350,000 barrels more of crude daily than a year ago and crude oil output is about 300,000 barrels a day above the 1938 level. Some hope for curtailing crude supply comes from the decision of the Texas Railroad Commission for shutdowns of eight days a month. The continued increase in Illinois output, however, remains the principal difficulty in balancing supply with demand. Some observers estimate that 150,000 to 200,000 barrels of oil from nonprorated areas are being sold under posted prices and while this amount is small in relation to total production, it does exert a certain amount of pressure on the general price structure.

Traction Bonds at New Highs

The market for bonds on the Stock Exchange today was generally stronger in moderately larger turnover than on the preceding day. Local traction issues were the best feature with new highs reached in some instances and gains ranging up to three points or more for active obligations.

The Treasury section was dull but prices remained firm for most of the list. Foreign bonds were spotty, some gains being recorded among the more active issues, notably Italy 7s of 1951 with a rise of 1¼ and fractional advances of Argentine 4½s of 1948 and Canada 4s of 1960. Elsewhere there were some sizeable declines.

Among the domestic bonds the strength was rather generally distributed to all sections except the public utilities. The average of 30 issues advanced 0.25 points on the day with the rail average for both the best and the second grade issues up 0.50 points. Ten industrials were up 0.03 and five utilities declined 0.06 points.

Strength in local tractions lifted Manhattan Railway bonds a fraction to more than 3 points in large dealings, while Interboroughs likewise scored gains of 3 points or more for several issues.

In the rail section there was a showing of strength in Great Northern 3¾s of '67 with gain of 1½ points, while more limited advances were made in some of the New York Central and Baltimore & Ohio issues. Southern Pacific liens had gains of more than a point and Southern Railways were strong.

Cocoa Futures Sell At Near Lowest Price

New York, June 20 (AP).—Cocoa futures for July delivery sold today at 3.98 cents a pound, lowest price recorded except for the bank closing week of March, 1933, when it went to 3.3 cents.

Traders in the New York Cocoa Exchange said the weakness seemed to be reflecting last week's easiness of stock market which the cocoa futures market sometimes follows. Holding for an expected rise has brought heavy accumulation of stocks in New York—1,400,000 bags, compared with 650,000 bags a year ago, and 1,300,000 bags in 1937.

Proposed Grain Rates Suspended by ICC

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday suspended, pending an investigation, proposed reductions in railroad freight rates on grain shipped from the Midwest to North Atlantic ports for export.

The reductions were to have become effective today but the I. C. C. suspended them to January 20, 1940. In the meantime, it will make an investigation to determine their reasonableness. They would have applied to shipments for export from Chicago and Peoria, North Dakota, St. Louis, Mo., and related points.

Union Pacific May Net 130% Above Year Ago

New York, June 20.—The Union Pacific Railroad System today reported net operating income for May, before fixed charges and other income, of $875,206, compared with $379,812 in May last year. Gross income for the month increased to $12,784,703 from $10,519,961 a year ago.

Int. Tel. & Tel. Corp.

International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation and subsidiaries today reported consolidated net income for the three months ended March 31 of $1,219,425 after charges, equal to 19 cents a share on common stock, compared with $2,299,336 or 36 cents a common share in the similar 1938 period.

Sosthenes Behn, president, told stockholders the decrease in income was due principally to the "further decline in the relative values of certain foreign currencies since the first quarter of 1938 . . . together with increased loss on foreign exchange arising from the translation of net current assets from foreign currencies to United States dollars.

Erie Railroad

Cleveland, June 20 (AP).—Erie Railroad announced today $559,272 net railway operating income for May, compared with an $18,777 deficit for May, 1938. Operating revenues totaled $6,204,878 against $5,401,122.

Lumber Shipments 67 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended June 10 stood at 68 per cent of the 1929 seasonal weekly average of production, 67 per cent of the seasonal weekly average of shipments in 1929 and 71 per cent of the seasonal weekly average of new business in 1929, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood and hardwood mills.

Reported new orders were 15 per cent above the weekly average of 1938 orders. Reported production was 20 per cent above the seasonal weekly average of 1938 production and shipments were 11 per cent in excess of 1938 seasonal weekly shipments.

Philippine Bonds To Be Paid August 1

Brig. Gen. Charles Burnett, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department, announced yesterday that Philippine bonds to the face value of $1,500,000, dated August 1, 1909, are due and payable August 1.

He said that outstanding bonds of that issue would be paid as of August 1, at the Treasury Department.

Wheat Prices Reverse Trend, Turn Upward

Mill Purchasing and Short Covering Are Factors in Rally

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 20.—Interrupting the June wheat market break which has reduced prices 8 to 9 cents a bushel, wheat quotations today staged a modest rally that held good to the closing bell.

Pit brokers could not pin the recovery movement on a definite cause, but said the market responded to a combination of mill purchasing and trade operations based on belief that a rally in wheat was overdue. Some previous short sellers were believed to have accepted profits by purchasing.

Maximum gains from early lows reached at the slight opening dip amounted to ¾@⅞ cent and wheat closed ⅛@½ higher than yesetrday. When July wheat sold at 70 cents early in the session it was at the lowest point in almost two months. At the close July was 70¾ and September 71½.

Other grains showed less price fluctuation but closed lower. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ lower, July 49⅝@49¾, September 50⅛@51, while oats lost ¼@⅜, rye ⅜@½ and lard 7 cents.

Lead Advanced to 4.85

New York, June 20 (AP).—The American Smelting & Refining Co. today advanced the price of lead 0.05 of a cent to 4.85 cents a pound, New York. This is the second advance of that amount within a week, the company having boosted the rate from 4.75 to 4.80 cents last Wednesday.

N. Y. Stock Exchange May Extend Hours

New York, June 20 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange will shortly appoint a special committee to consider keeping the exchange open one hour later each day, in connection with a proposal to close Saturday during July and August. Gov. Lehman yesterday signed the Quinn law, permitting banks and trust companies in the State to close Saturdays during July and August by approval of a majority of board of directors of each bank. The New York clearing house committee expects to meet in the next few days to decide what the 19 member banks will do. The other 131 banks in the metropolitan district, the savings banks, and the Federal Reserve will probably govern their actions by the clearing house committee decision. The attitude of the stock exchange on the question will be taken up by the board of governors June 28.

Silver in London Falls to Lowest Since Last Fall

London, June 20 (AP).—Silver in the bullion market fell today to the lowest price since last year. Speculative selling from Bombay appeared on rumors the United States might curtail the purchase of foreign silver.

Cash silver, for immediate delivery, dropped one half-penny to 19⅛ pence an ounce. Forward metal declined 7-16 of a penny to 18 15-16 pence.

The slump was also affected by the fear of London dealers that the present United States purchase price of 43 cents an ounce for silver from foreign sources might be discontinued. U. S. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced that the Government would reconsider its silver policy on June 30.

Texas Corp. Cuts Tank Gasoline Price

New York, June 20 (AP).—The Texas Corporation today reduced the tank wagon price of gasoline ½ cent in New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, thus rescinding the ½-cent boost made in these States last week, an action not concurred in by several leading companies.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today we will take up a few slam problems that brought grief to players. The first is from I. G., who writes:

"I am sitting South, and my partner, North, bids one spade. At this point allow me to digress. My partner and I are playing together for the first time. We do not ask the proverbial question. 'What system do you use?' etc.; we simply declare that we respond to partner's original bid with no trump if we have a king and a queen and give a positive response with a trick and a half.

"Now, for the hand and the blow-up. As I said, partner bids a spade. I hold;

♠K7532
♡A6

♣Q9843

"I bid two clubs. Opponent at left bids two diamonds; my partner, three spades. I say four spades. Partner passes.

"We make seven.

♠AQJ64
♡84
◇A5
♣AK72

"Who's wrong? Why?"

Under ordinary circumstances. I. G. might have had better luck with his two-club bid. This time, however, it turned out to be an ambiguous call that was chiefly responsible for the pair's failure to reach a slam.

A direct bid of three spades would have been less confusing to I. G.'s partner. Certainly it would have enabled the players to reach six, if not seven.

I. G. might have attempted to rectify the situation by bidding five spades, instead of four spades. His partner's jump to three indicated the hand would be safe at five. Of course, the partner could have made another try for slam, but we believe the two-club bid was the cause of it all.

They Bid Too Much

D. J. C. wants to know who's fault it was that he and his partner reached an unmakable small slam with these cards:

West	East
♠86	♠J10974
♡1075	♡AJ
◇KQ1062	◇None
♣Q75	♣AKJ1096

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT.	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Says D. J. C.: "My contention is that the five-diamond call was entirely out of order and that he should have left me in five clubs."

While we agree emphatically with D. J. C. that North's five-diamond bid never should have been made, we feel constrained to point out that D. J. C. erred slightly in bidding his spades before his club suit. According to the experts, the longest suit should be bid first under normal circumstances.

West blundered badly. If he is to bid diamonds he must do so much earlier in the bidding, and he had the opportunity when East said three clubs

Dropped Precipitately

L. R. writes of a lost small slam occasioned by one player failing to respond to his partner's jump overcall. Here is what he says:

"South was dealer and passed. West bid one club. North bid two diamonds and East passed, as did South and West.

"North claimed that by her bidding two diamonds over West's one club, South must keep the bidding open. As it turned out, North made a small slam.

"Wasn't the bid of two diamonds over one club a demand bid?"

Not quite, but almost. A jump overcall is not considered forcing, but it does show a strong hand, and partner is expected to respond with about one high-card trick, with trump support and a singleton or with good distribution.

In other words, a partner, although not forced to respond, is expected to hold the bidding open with very little strength.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Nearly three months ahead of the zero hour the American Federation of Government Employes has sent out its call for the national convention in Atlantic City.

Berneice B. Heffner, national secretary, said the convention should start promptly at 10 a. m., September 11, and urged representatives of all lodges to be there, so that "the decisions and actions of the convention will represent the judgment and the opinion of the rank and file of membership."

Extension of civil service to administrative employes of the Works Progress Administration was urged by the Washington committee of the National Women's Trade Union League as an amendment to House bill 960.

In a resolution sent to Chairman Ramspeck and other members of the House Civil Service Committee, the Trade Union League said it believed "in extension of the merit system to all Government employes as rapidly as possible."

As a second amendment to the House civil service measure, the League urged that "employes who fail to pass the civil service examinations, but who have given satisfactory service, be retained on their present jobs, although not given civil service status."

INFORMATION TO BE FILED for the next hot day . . . sale of 659 acres of Government land in the famous Sun Valley, Idaho, winter resort has been authorized by Secretary Ickes for construction of a new ski slide.

Interior Department officials said they had studied the ground thoroughly, finding that its only possible uses were for seasonal grazing or winter skiing. The skiers won the decision, and now the land will be sold at public auction at a minimum price of $5.50 an acre.

WASHINGTON'S OWN OUTDOORS will be covered over the week-end in a series of walks and tours arranged by the National Park service.

For early risers a "bird walk" through Fort Bunker Hill Park, near the Franciscan Monastery, is planned for 7 a. m. Sunday. Park Ranger Kehr will meet the hikers at Fourteenth and Otis streets northeast.

From 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. Sunday a "tree and flower" walk along the C. & O. Canal towpath near Brookmont, Md., has been arranged. For motorists the meeting place will be out beyond the Dalecarlia reservoirs, at the end of Broad street. Street car riders can find the rendezvous near stop 22A of the Cabin John car line.

Highlights in the life of George Washington will be glimpsed in an all day motor trip Sunday, led by Park Naturalist McHenry. First stop on the tour will be the George Washington Birthplace National Monument, in Westmoreland, Va., near Oak Grove, where the visitors will have a picnic lunch.

Bob Burns Says—

I had another birthday not long ago and it made me do a lot'ta thinkin'. A man ain't got long on this earth and he ought'a get as much done in that short time as he possibly can. Right after I finish writin' this, I'm going to do somethin' I should'a done three years ago—I'm goin' to clean out my pipe.

Last time I was home Grandpaw Pelican Snelson celebrated his 99th birthday. There was a big party, with a birthday cake, and a reporter from the Press-Argus interviewed him. He said, "Mr. Snelson, we'd like to know to what you attribute your great age?"

Grandpaw said, "To smokin', young fella. I'm collectin' cigar coupons to get a tuba horn, and by heck I'll do it before I die!"

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER XV

But perhaps, Jody speculated, he did have the fever. Perhaps he was coming down with the measles. He felt his face and stomach. There was no rash yet, no sweat. He flounced back and forth in the bed to hurry the heating. He realized that he felt as well as ever; better, actually, than before the plenitude of meat had tempted him into overeating. He recalled the quantities of fresh sausage and of venison that he had eaten without his mother's stopping him. Perhaps after all the brierberries had had nothing to do with it. He was sweating at last.

HE CALLED, "Hey, Ma, come see! The sweat's done come."

She came to him and examined him.

"You feel as good as I do," she said. "Git outen that bed."

He threw back the covers and stepped out onto the deer-skin rug. For a moment he was light-headed.

"Yessum. Sort o' weakified."

"Well, you ain't et nothin'. Git into your shirt and breeches and come git you some dinner."

He dressed quickly and followed her to the kitchen. The food was still warm. She laid out biscuits for him, and a plate of hash, and poured him a cup of sweet milk. She watched him eat.

"I hoped you'd git up a leetle mite pacified," she said.

"Kin I have some more hash, Ma?"

"Where's Pa?"

"To the lot, I reckon."

He strolled in search of him. Penny was sitting idly, for once, on the gate.

"Well, son," he said, "you look right peert."

"I feel good."

"Pa——"

"Yes, son."

"I don't figger there was nothin' ailded me but green brierberries."

"That's about what I figgered. I never said nothin' to your Ma, for she's death on a belly-full of green brierberries."

Jody sighed with relief.

Penny said, "I been settin' here studyin'. The moon'll be right in a hour-two. What say you and me git us a couple o' bobs and go fishin'?"

"In the creek?"

"I'll bet we kin ketch us a catty-wampus on one o' them ponds."

"We kin sure pleasure ourselves tryin'."

THEY WENT TOGETHER to the shed back of the house to gather their paraphernalia. Penny discarded an old hook and rigged two new ones. He cut short hairs from the tail of the deer he had shot and made lures of the gray and white wisps. He tied them invisibly to the fish-hooks.

"If I was a fish, I'd strike at this myself," he said.

"Me and Jody is goin' bobbin' for bass."

"I thought you was give out and Jody was ailin'."

"That's why we're goin' fishin'," he said.

She followed to the door and watched after them.

"If you don't git no bass," she called, "ketch me a leetle bream I kin fry crisp and eat bones and all."

"We'll not come back without somethin'," he promised.

The afternoon was warm but the way seemed short. In a way, Jody thought, fishing was better than hunting. It was not so exciting, but neither was there terror. The heart beat at a reasonable cadence. There was time to look about, and see the increase of green leaves in the live oaks and magnolias. They stopped at a familiar pond. It was shallow from too long dryness. Penny found a grasshopper and threw it into the water. There was no strike; no hungry swirl of waters.

"I'm feered the fish has died outen here," he said. "These leetle ol' ponds in the middle o'nowhere has allus been a puzzlement to me. I cain't see how the fish lives here, year on year."

He caught another grasshopper and hurled it wothout resuli.

"The poor fish," he said. "Helpless in a world of their own. 'Stead o' fishin' for 'em, I'd ought to come out here and feed 'em."

He lifted his bamboo rod over his shoulder.

"Mebbe the Lord figgers the same about me,' he chuckled. "Mebbe he looks down and says 'There's Penny Baxter tryin' to make out on the clearin'.'" He added, "But hit's a good clearin'. Likely the fish is as content as me."

Jody said, "Look, Pa, there's people."

Human beings were a stranger sight in the lonely place of live oak islands and saw-grass ponds and prairies, than the creatures. Penny shaded his eyes. A file of half a dozen men and women was entering the scrub road they had just left behind.

"Hit's the Minorcans," he said. "Huntin' gophers."

JODY SAW NOW the sacks over their shoulders. The small dusty land-turtles whose deep burrows were an indication of the poorest soil, were the last food most inhabitants of the scrub considered edible.

"I've allus wondered," Penny said, "didn't they make a medicine mebbe outen the gophers. Don't seem like they'd come here clear from the coast to hunt them things jest to eat."

"Let's slip back clost and look at 'em," Jody said.

"I'd not pry on the poor things," Penny said. "The Minorcans is a people was mighty bad put upon. My father knowed their hull history. A English feller carried 'em to New Smyrna, over by the ocean and the Indian River. He promised 'em a pure heaven and put 'em to work. And when times got bad and the crops failed, he left 'em to nigh about starve to death. There wasn't many left."

"Is they like gypsies?"

"No, for gypsies is wild. The men is dark, like gypsies, but the women is fair when they're young. They mind their own business and live peaceable."

The procession disappeared into the scrub. Jody tingled, and the hair stirred on the back of his neck. It was like seeing Spaniards. It was as though phantoms, dark and shadowy, and not men and women, had passed before him, weighted with their strange burden of gophers and injustice.

Penny said, "Now the bass had ought to be thick as tadpoles in that pond right over there."

They were in territory a little west of the prairie's rim, where old Slewfoot had fed on fire-plant. Dry weather had sucked up much of the water and the marsh had broad areas that were now firm and dry. The ponds showed plainly. They had withdrawn from the saw-grass and only lily pads troubled the water's surface. A Blue Peter ran across them, bright with yellow legs and painted face. A slight breath of air rippled across the marsh and the water rippled under it. The lily pads tipped, an instant, their broad shining leaves to the glint of the sun.

"Jest enough of a riffle," Penny said, "and the moon jest right."

HE FASTENED LENGTHS of line to the two poles and attached the deer-hair bobs.

"Now you work your bob acrost the north end and I'll try the south. Don't make no fuss, walkin'."

Jody stood a moment to watch his father make an expert cast across the pond. He marveled at the skill of the knotted hands. The bob lay at the edge of a cluster of lily pads. Penny began to jerk it slowly across the water. It dipped and bobbed with the irregular rhythm of a live insect. There was no strike and Penny drew in his line and cast again in the same place. He called to invisible fish, lurking near the weedy bottom.

"Now Grandpappy, I kin see you settin' there on your stoop." He jerked the bob more slowly. "You better lay down your pipe and come git your dinner."

Jody tore himself from the fascination of his father's performance and moved to his end of the pond. He cast badly for a time, tangling his line and laying his bob in the most unlikely places; over-reaching the narrow pond and enmeshing the hook in the tough saw-grass. Then something of harmony came to him. He felt his arm swing in a satisfying arc. His wrist flexed at the proper moment. He laid the bob exactly where he had meant to, at the edge of a patch of switch-grass.

Penny called, "Mighty nice, son. Leave it lay jest a minute. Then git ready the first second you jerk it."

He had not known his father was watching. He was tense. He jerked his pole cautiously and the bob flipped across the water. There was a swirl, a silver form shot half clear of the water, an open mouth as big as a cook pot enveloped the bob. A weight like a millstone dropped at the end of his line, fought like a wildcat and pulled him off balance. He braced himself against the frenzy to which he was irrevocably attached.

Penny called, "Take it easy. Don't let him git under them bonnets. Keep the tip o' your pole up. Don't give him no slack."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Bergdoll Asks U. S. Return His Property

Grover C. Bergdoll has asked the Attorney General for the return of some $500,000 property he forfeited as a draft dodger in the World War.

Saying this yesterday, Justice Department officials added that they contemplated no action on the request until the question of Bergdoll's citizenship is established.

The Labor Department has held Bergdoll is not a citizen, but an alien.

Carpenter Strike Mediation Fails

Striking carpenters yesterday failed to reach any agreement with local contractors in a three-hour conference called by Howard T. Colvin, of the United States Conciliation Service.

No date was set for another attempt at mediation in the dispute which has kept 900 carpenters idle for nine days. Another 500 carpenters are working under tentative agreements.

Sculptors Attack Competition for Jefferson Statue

Sculptors Guild, Inc., a society of American sculptors with headquarters in New York, yesterday issued a statement attacking the procedure by which a competition is being conducted for a statue of Thomas Jefferson to be installed in the memorial now being built at the Tidal Basin.

Main point of criticism is that, of the three judges, one is an associate of Dr. Fiske Kimball, a member of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, and another associated professionally with the late John Russell Pope, whose architectural firm designed the memorial building.

The judges cited are Henri Marceau, assistant director of the Philadelphia Museum, and James Earle Fraser, a sculptor. Third member of the jury is Heinz Warneke, a sculptor.

3 C. U. Students Win Architecture Prizes

J. E. Dundin, William O'Neil and R. T. Daniel, students at Catholic University, were among ten finalists in the Society of Beaux-Arts Architects' annual Paris Prize competition, it was announced yesterday.

Their drawings will be on exhibit at the society's rooms in New York City in June, July and August and then will be sent on tour.

Garbage Truck Worker Crushed To Death in Crash

Clarence Jordan, 42, colored, of 209 Virginia avenue southeast, was riding at his position on the front of the garbage truck when it collided with a vegetable truck operated by Isaac G. Flegler, 42, of Atlanta, at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue northwest. He suffered a fractured skull and several fractured ribs.

Charged with reckless driving, Mage Evans, 306 L street northwest, operator of the District truck, was released on the personal bond of a Garbage Disposal plant official. Flegler posted $100 bond as a material witness.

Inquest Set in 40th Traffic Fatality

An inquest will be held at the morgue this morning in connection with the death of the District's fortieth traffic victim—Clarence Jordan, colored, 42, of 209 Virginia avenue.

Jordan died after a freak accident at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue Monday. He was sitting on the fender seat of a garbage truck when it collided with a second truck.

Mage V. Evans, 306 L street southeast, driver of the refuse truck, was charged with reckless driving, and released in custody of his supervisor to appear at the coroner's hearing. The driver of the second truck, Isaac T. Flegle, 39, of Atlanta, posted $100 bail as a Government witness.

K. C. Council Has Birthday

The forty-first anniversary of Keane Council, No. 353, Knights of Columbus, was celebrated at the the Continental Hotel with a dinner dance and entertainment arranged by Charles Dean. State Deputy Thomas F. Carlin gave the invocation, and Past District Deputy James P. McKeon, chairman of the banquet committee, introduced the grand knights and their councils.

Grand Knight Francis J. Rafferty, of Keane Council, introduced the newly elected officers of his council. Announcements were made of the annual concert and dance, to be held on June 23, and moonlight excursions on the Potomac July 17.
